Indicates He Will Insist C. I. O. Return to Fold; Conference Today.

Lewis Keeps Mum, Will Not Appear

By Sidney Olson.

In a fog of uncertainty and pessimism, heightened by a last-minute statement by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, the armistice delegates of labor's far-flung civil war will meet here today in an attempt to chart a united future for the country's 8,000,000 unionized workers.

The gloomy realism with which the meeting is generally regarded was significantly intensified when Green, in a statement declaring that federation delegates will bring "open minds" to the meeting, asserted:

"We earnestly hope and believe that the negotiations can result in the restoration of a united labor movement in this country under the banner of the American Federation of Labor."

Green's implied insistence that the Committee for Industrial Organization must subordinate itself to the federation was regarded immediately as hampering the delicate processes of rapprochement which cool-headed subordinates in both groups have been gradually establishing in the past weeks.

Lewis Refuses Comment.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., secessionists from the older group, refused to comment on Green's statement. One of his assistants, however, said that naturally Lewis would balk at Green's demand and added that Lewis, in absenting himself from the meeting today, would let his chieftains have a free hand, "without making statements to the press."

Green's statement was issued after a secret meeting with the three A. F. of L. delegates, George Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks; Matthew Woll, of the Photo-engravers, and G. M. Bugniazet, of the Brotherhood of Electric Workers. He said:

"Our committee will enter tomorrow's conference with open minds.

"Our committee will be bound by no prior commitments or pledges. It will be entirely free and unrestricted in its efforts to work out a settlement.

"We are sincerely desirous of peace. We earnestly hope and believe that the negotiations can result in the restoration of a united labor movement in this country under the banner of the American Federation of Labor.

"The interests of the Nation and of labor itself demand such an outcome.

"The door of the American Federation of Labor is open. It has been held open for two years. We

C. I. O. Affiliate Accuses U. S. Official of 'Bias' in Petition.

By Edward T. Folliard

Angered by the arrest of 14 sailors of the S. S. Algic, Government-owned freighter, the National Maritime Union, C. I. O. affiliate, yesterday demanded the removal of Joseph P. Kennedy as chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

The union also asked for the scalp of Dan S. Ring, personnel officer and labor representative of the Maritime Commission.

Both Ring and Kennedy were accused of "bias and prejudice against organized labor," particularly against the C. I. O.

The petition demanding Kennedy's removal, which was addressed to President Roosevelt, was prepared by Patrick R. Whalen, Baltimore port chairman of the National Maritime Union, and approved at a meeting in that city.

Whalen yesterday admitted that on Friday he sent a cablegram to the Stevedores Syndicate in Montevideo, Uruguay, asking it to take "action" to bring about the release of the crew of the Algic. The stevedores responded by refusing to unload the S. S. Collingsworth, another Government-owned freighter.

Strike Abandoned.

They later abandoned the strike when Joseph Curran, general organizer of the National Maritime Union, cabled them to ignore Whalen's appeal as it would "jeopardize the union's position here."

Whalen, in his cablegram, reminded the Uruguayan stevedores that the crew of the Algic had staged a strike in "sympathy" with them when the Algic anchored at Montevideo on September 10.

It was that sit-down strike that led Saturday to the arrest of 14 members of the Algic crew on Federal warrants charging them with conspiring to deprive Capt. Joseph Gainard of his authority in a foreign port, a charge which comes under the statute of "inciting to mutiny and revolt."

The 14 sailors, who were arrested

Cole Porter Hurt When Horse Falls

Masquerader, Ridden by Lieut. Scott Stanford, Dips Foot at Water Hazard; Dakota, American Horse, Is Champion.

The United States Army lost the international military team jumping championship to the Belgians yesterday by the margin of a horse's wet hoof.

More than 7,000 persons gathered at Meadowbrook to watch the final day of the Inter-American Horse Show saw Masquerader, ridden by Lieut. Scott Stanford, wet one hoof while clearing a water hazard, the last jump and America's last chance for victory. The situation was similar to a baseball player striking out in the ninth inning with the bases loaded and two men out.

The hoof that Masquerader splashed into the water meant that the United States Army team lost by two faults. The final score was 65 faults for the Belgians, 67 for the Americans.

Dakota, gallant old bay gelding of the American team, emerged the champion military jumper of the show after tying in performance yesterday with Ibrahim, gray pride of the Belgians. Both horses were charged with four faults yesterday but Dakota, ridden by Lieut. F. P. Wing, went into the final day of competition with a half-point advantage.

Bright skies and brisk autumn weather favored the meet yesterday but the going was slippery and accounted for one nasty spill. Charley Carrico was dragged through the mud for about 20 yards after he had slid off Hunger Marcher in the civilian jumper event.

The muddy turf, however, proved no handicap to the dressage exhibition given by Americn Lady and Capt. Isaac Kitts. The mare's performance was as delicate and dainty as it is under the best conditions.

30 Lost as Blaze Sweeps Ship Off China; Score Safe

London (Monday), Oct. 25 (U.P.).—An Exchange Telegraph Agency dispatch from Hongkong today reported that 30 persons were missing after fire forced abandonment of the British steamer Kaitangata.

The ship sent out an S O S at midnight, between Hongkong and Haiphong, French Indo-China. The British steamer Nanning went to the rescue and took off the officers, the radio operator and 13 crew members. She continued searching for the 30 reported missing.

1,700 Reported Slain or Hurt In Haitian-Dominican Riots

By the Associated Press.

Port au Prince, Haiti, Oct. 24.—Trustworthy sources reported today that more than 300 persons were killed 10 days ago in outbreaks along the Haitian-Dominican frontier. An equal number was said to have been wounded.

The disorders were described as result of bitter resentment in border towns of the Dominican Republic against heavy immigration of Haitian laborers.

Most of the dead and wounded were Haitians.

Public indignation ran so high in Haiti today that authorities feared reprisals against Dominicans residing in Port au Prince and Cape Haitien.

All public demonstrations were forbidden. Police squads patrolled the cities to disperse gatherings.

Authorities of the two governments have launched an investigation to determine the exact number of dead and wounded and to place responsibility.

Unconfirmed reports, based on statements of Haitians who escaped across the border, predicted the final toll would reach 1,700 dead and wounded, mostly women and children.

Envoys Scout Danger.

Informed of Associated Press reports that 300 persons had been killed, Elie Lescot, Haitian Minister to the United States, and Andres Pastoriza, Dominican Minister, last night issued an official press release, prepared by their govern-

Gunmen Lock Up Gas Attendants, Escape With $76

Two young colored bandits last night held up three attendants in a gasoline station at 49 Massachusetts avenue northwest and escaped with $76.

After forcing Clarence M. Bailey, 27, of Arlington, Va., to open the cash register the bandits, both of whom were armed, made all three men lie on the floor until they had ransacked drawers in a search for further cash. The other two employes were C. H. Foreman, of 1439 Ridge road southeast, the manager, and Earl Jones, of 1339 Fifteenth street northwest.

The bandits then locked the three men in a wash room and escaped. A customer, hearing their cries, released the three imprisoned men about five minutes later.

Afraid to Exhibit Report Card, Girl Wanders Six Days

Indianapolis, Oct. 24 (AP).—Missing six days because of a fear of returning home to show her school report card, 11-year-old Nellie Stevens was found alive but weak and hungry here today, ending a State-wide search.

A barking dog led a neighbor boy to a spot behind a vacant house where the girl lay on a blanket beneath shrubbery, almost within sight of the home of her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hogatt. She was taken to a hospital.

In the bosom of her dress was found the report card which Nellie said had caused her disappearance.

In Lovejoy's pockets were found railroad tickets to Los Angeles on a train due to leave Washington at 11 p. m., one hour after they were struck down.

Bombs Blast German and French Ships

Other Vessel Attacked by Air Raiders Near Barcelona.

By the Associated Press.

Perpignan, France, Oct. 24.—The 2,413-ton French freighter Oued Mellah was bombed by an unidentified plane off Barcelona, Spain, today, and abandoned at sea by its crew. Two French warships immediately hurried to the scene.

The warships reported all of the crew was saved, but that the vessel was gravely damaged.

The freighter, belonging to the Paquet Line, of Marseille, which maintains service between France and North Africa, was heading for Port Vendres, French port south of Perpignan, near the Franco-Spanish frontier.

The ship's message said a bomb struck the vessel squarely, forcing the crew to evacuate after sending wireless messages for help.

[Meanwhile in Rome, the official Italian News Agency said in a St. Jean de Luz, France, dispatch that an unidentified German steamer was reported to have been torpedoed and sunk off Cartagena, Spain. Cartagena is a port in southeast Spain in the Mediterranean.—Editor's Note.]

The plane attack was considered the gravest Mediterranean incident since the Nyon accord, backed principally by France and Great Britain, established a sea patrol against marine marauders.

Apparently the air raiders had disappeared by the time French warships reached the scene, and radio messages made clear that nationality of the plane was not determined.

Naval authorities said the destroyer Milan was staying with the Oued Mellah, which remained afloat.

Hope to Cut Off Barcelona.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 24.—Insurgent troop trains rumbled into Zaragoza Province today bringing reinforcements for Generalissimo Francisco Franco's projected final drive to cut Barcelona from Valencia and end Spain's 15-month-old civil war.

Government artillery pounded the railroad tracks between Teruel and Zaragoza on the eastern front in an attempt to break up troop movements.

There was intense activity in insurgent territory behind the Aragon front, twisting 300 miles south from the French border to Teruel. Save for slight insurgent gains in the Sabinanigo sector, however, nearly all sections of the battle front were quiet as an aftermath of the insurgent conquest of northwestern Spain.

The insurgent aviation command announced its war planes had sunk

Japanese Aviator Slays British Soldier, Strafes Americans at Shanghai

Invaders Report General Advance

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Oct. 24.—A British soldier was killed and five Americanss and about a score of other foreigners were endangered today when a Japanese warplane, with machine guns blazing, swooped five times over groups near the western edge of Shanghai's International Settlement.

A British sentry at the scene said British soldiers returned the Japanese airman's fire with automatic rifles. British army authorities officially branded the affair a "deliberate attack." Japanese naval and civilian officers quickly expressed regret to the British.

British army officers disclosed that three British outposts in the Keswick road area were sprayed by the Japanese airman's bullets and that a second British soldier escaped serious injury when a cigaret case stopped a bullet which pierced his uniform.

Japanese Claim Error.

A Japanese spokesman said the shooting was due to the error of an aviator who believed he was shooting at Chinese. United States Consul General Clarence E. Gauss protested to the Japanese consulate general.

The attack coincided with what Japanese spokesmen called a general advance of their forces along the front north and northwest of Shanghai, with the Chinese retiring at nearly all points.

The Japanese said they had advanced to the gates of Tazang, keypoint in the Chinese defenses and objective of a great battle raging for four days, and were within 2 miles of Nanziang, 10 miles west of Shanghai. Large Chinese forces were said to have been trapped near Nanziang.

"Our lines are intact and the morale of our troops is excellent," he declared.

Chinese Hold Chapei.

The Chinese still clung to Chapei, adjoining the International Settlement, holding firm the right wing of their defense line. It was understood Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek had ordered Chapei held at all costs.

[Chinese reports said Japanese planes killed more than 200 persons and wounded 400 in a bombing attack on Aungking, 18 miles southwest of Shanghai, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

The British victim of the Japanese attack was Rifleman W. McGowan, of the Royal Ulster Rifles, native of Donegal, Ireland. He died soon after admission to a hospital.

JEAN BATTEN.

Jean Batten's 5-Day Hop Sets Australia-to-Britain Record

27-Year-Old Flier Breaks Record Made by Male Rival, Lands Near Goal 'Too Exhausted' to Continue, But Goes on After Cup of Tea.

By the United Press.

Croydon, England, Oct. 24.—Miss Jean Batten, 27-year-old New Zealand girl, who gave up a musical career because "flying is so much more fun than practicing 'The Maiden's Prayer,'" today established a new solo record over the perilous 10,720-mile route from Australia to England.

She brought her plane down amidst a cheering crowd at Croydon Airdrome at 4:26 p. m. after flying from Port Darwin, Australia, in the record time of 5 days 18 hours and 15 minutes.

The previous record was 6 days 8 hours and 25 minutes, established last May 3 by Harry F. Broadbent, Australian distance flier, with whom Miss Batten has been engaged in a "record duel" for two years.

Broadbent is now attempting to break Miss Batten's England-to-Australia record of 5 days 21 hours and 3 minutes, established a year ago this month.

It was his England-to-Australia record that Miss Batten broke in October, 1936.

The slim, dark-haired girl, whose first plane was one used by the Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales, arrived at Lympne airdrome at 3:45 p. m. from Marseilles, France. She at first announced that she was "too completely worn out" to continue on to Croydon and claim the record. But

American Aviator Uses 200-Foot Pier In Plane Take-Off

Taking off from a 200-foot pier on the Buenos Aires waterfront, Lieut. Frank Sinclair, test pilot, lifted a new Seversky "convoy fighter" off the dock with 50 feet to spare, it was learned here yesterday.

Recently shipped to Argentina, the plane was unloaded and found to have too wide a wing-span to permit wheeling through the streets.

Having obtained permission from army and civilian authorities, Lieut. Sinclair decided on the unorthodox take-off, rather than dismantle the plane.

Company officials describe the Seversky "convoy fighter" as the fastest two-place plane in the world. It is capable of top speed of approximately 300 miles an hour and can carry seven machine guns and 600 pounds of bombs.

Hawaiian Playboy Prince Is Held in Slaying Of Waikiki Beauty Slashed at Drinking Party

Throat Cut in Fight, Police Believe; He 'Doesn't Remember.'

By the United Press.

Honolulu, Oct. 24.—Born to the feathered cloak of Hawaiian kings, Prince David Kawananakoa—Prince Koke they call him—sat in jail here today while police battered at a wall of mystery surrounding the killing of a beautiful half-Hawaiian girl last night at fashionable Waikiki.

Maj. Bernard J. Tooher, Air Corps, U. S. A., also was questioned by police.

Called to "Flapper's Half Acre," a palm bordered section of bungalows and apartment houses known as the center of Honolulu night life, police found the girl, 21-year-old Arvilla Kinslea, slender and brunette, with a jagged wound in her throat and her face badly slashed. They said she had not been stabbed with a knife; that the wounds were ragged and seemed to have been made by "a broken plate or piece of glass."

Detective Jack Bothelo, of the Honolulu police department, who ordered the 32-year-old prince held for questioning, said the girl apparently was killed in "some sort of a fight." The apartment is a stone's throw from world-famous Waikiki Beach.

The prince admitted he had been drinking at the party. He said he had "no remembrance" of events which led up to the girl's death.

The entire affair was shrouded in mystery, and police refused to permit newspapermen to question Kawananakoa. According to disconnected stories told by others present at the party, the girl and her sister, Rose, had gathered at Miss Kinslea's apartment for a midnight supper, with three men, including the prince and Maj. Tooher.

John Hollinger, who attended, told police that while the prince and Arvilla were in the kitchen he heard a "thud."

An instant later Kawananakoa emerged, carrying the girl in his arms, Hollinger said. She was unconscious, and the ragged wound in her neck was gushing blood.

Church Attack On War Heard By Roosevelt

Bishops' Message Read by Episcopal Rector at Hyde Park.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 24.—President Roosevelt, spending a quiet country Sabbath at home, heard his rector read a sweeping condemnation of war and exploitation of the weak.

The words on war and social and economic problems were in a letter from the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church to its clergy and laity.

The Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector of St. James' Church, read the pastoral communication to his congregation—including the President—as required by church law. The letter was prepared by the bishops in session at Cincinnati recently.

"War is hateful not only because of its terrible waste of human life and wealth," the letter said, "but also because it is the denial of every principle of Christianity.

"Modern warfare is no longer limited to the activities of armed forces but, as we well know today, it is the bombing of defenseless cities and the deliberate slaughter of men, women and children."

Termed Un-Christian.

From that denunciation of war the bishops turned to a general condemnation of those who make capital of the weak.

"Exploitation is un-Christian," they said, "not merely because it is unfair to groups or individuals but chiefly because it is a denial of the fatherhood of God.

"Our present moral and economic difficulties can be traced to the exploitation of the weak and helpless by the strong, and the way out will be found when every man learns to think in terms of other people's rights and to regard the needs of his remotest fellow man as his own or as those of his blood brother."

The church, they added, "must not sit quietly by when the world faces acute social and economic problems."

Mr. Roosevelt heard the letter, which was substituted for the usual morning sermon, from his family pew. He attended services with his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and a local friend, Maj. Harry Hooker.

After services, the Roosevelt party returned to the country quiet of the elder Mrs. Roosevelt's home, where the President stays on his visits from Washington.

He will remain here ten days—through the November 2 local election.

Merchant Shakes When Told Gun He Faced Was Loaded

Hyman Zitomer, 51, looked down the barrel of a loaded revolver yesterday without a tremor—until several hours later.

Two colored men walked into his store at 431 F street southwest as he was counting the day's receipts.

Zitomer looked at his assailants and decided the gun was only a toy. He grabbed at it and was struck in the face by both men. They fled empty-handed.

Zitomer was relieved when they left, because business had been good, and he had more than $75 in the store.

He still was relieved when he saw one of the men fire a shot at a dog that got in their way as they fled. He decided it must have been a cap pistol.

But when police found the bullet lodged in the wall of a nearby house, Zitomer was speechless.

Working for Washington

By Christine Sadler.

Complete "state's rights" for the District, a new library for their section, development of the Reno Parkway, a stadium for Woodrow Wilson High School, night schools, and a comprehensive recreational program for boys—these are some of the leading topics discussed by members of the Friendship Citizens Association.

Both officially and personally, President Samuel J. Flickinger gets irked when he recalls that there are "whole States which have less population than we have but which also have Senators and Representatives."

The way it is now, as he sees it, Congressmen use the District as a testing ground for almost any idea which happens to come to them. "When we have our own Representatives they will be a little more careful about what they try out," he says. He has no doubt that, ultimately, suffrage will be granted to Washingtonians.

Assails Apathy.

"At least we will be permitted to have a say about the amount of money to be collected in taxes from us, the manner in which it shall be expended, and also the type of tax."

The quicker citizens rouse themselves the quicker this time will come, he believes. Citizen apathy is a great drawback to be overcome in the District, in his opinion.

The Friendship Citizens' Association was formerly the Northwest Suburban Citizens' Association. It is one of the oldest and most active in the District. According to Flickinger it has approximately 700 members, of which almost 500 were taken in last year. Just as an illustration of how membership can be increased, he brought in 100 new members by himself.

Seek Branch Library.

The new branch library is the big objective of the association at this time. The present library was secured in 1927 and has been used extensively, but "the saturation point is reached." An adequate supply of new books is the need. Flickinger believes that efficient branches are more essential to a library system in a city such as Washington than the "proposed $2,000,000 downtown building would be."

In co-operation with five other citizens' associations and the Community Center Department of the public schools an extensive boys' program is being pushed by the Friendship group.

The group has been active in working for full use of school facilities and to secure new schools. The scope of night classes at Woodrow Wilson it hopes will be enlarged and new classes opened at other schools in the area.

Serving Fourth Term.

Flickinger is serving his fourth term as president of the Friendship organization. He is also a delegate to the Federation of Citizens' Associations and a member of its fiscal relations committee. He has thought over the District tax situation a great deal. The business tax, in his opinion probably is full of inequalities but has not been given a fair trial. An income tax to "catch everyone" could never be passed, he believes. All in all, the sales tax comes nearest to being the one which he believes could be administered equally here.

He came to Washington from New Jersey to go to school, in 1914. He studied law at George Washington University and did post-graduate work at both Georgetown and American universities. He is attorney for the Interior Department, specialist in Indian affairs and eligible to practice before the District and U. S. Supreme courts and the Court of Appeals. He is a member of the American Legion and at the present time is organizing a George Washington Alumni Club in the Interior Department.

He likes to motor, swim and play golf. Has a wife and five children, lives at 4611 Forty-third street northwest.

On Wednesday—Henry W. Austin, president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Danzig Nazis Jail Anti-Jew Rioters

Danzig, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—The Nazi Party, which obtained complete control of the "Free City" of Danzig last Thursday, today demanded punishment of terrorists who last night invaded Jewish districts and wrecked many shops. Police arrested 65 demonstrators.

Scores of store windows were smashed and walls of Jewish houses and shops were decorated with the Soviet star.

Nazis, now in complete control of the Danzig Volkstag since abolition of the Catholic Center Opposition Party, attributed disorders to "excitement of increasing Jewish immigration from Poland." Many Jews are known to have fled to Danzig from anti-Jewish disorders in Warsaw, Cracow and other Polish cities.

New Farm Aid To Cost Billion In Its First Year

700 Million for Crop Rule, 300 for Loans Is Way Leaders Forecast It.

By the Associated Press.

The new farm program, part of which Congress must finance from new taxes, may cost $1,000,000,000 in its first year.

Agriculture Department experts and others have estimated a probable cost of $700,000,000 for surplus crop control. President Roosevelt said in his revised budget estimate that 1937 cotton loans would cost $130,000,000.

Some believe that proposed corn loans, if granted, easily could cost $170,000,000 considering that this year's crop forecast runs 1,000,000,000 bushels above the 1936 yield and that approximately $150,000,000 was lent on the 1934 corn loan program.

New Taxes Necessary.

The cotton loans have been shouldered by the Treasury, but Mr. Roosevelt has made it plain Congress must find a way to pay for the new farm act to be asked of the special session convening on November 15. If there is to be a corn loan program, some believe it may have to be a mandatory action of Congress and probably financed from new sources of revenue.

Administration leaders want crop control legislation. At the same time President Roosevelt expresses a desire to balance the budget in the fiscal year 1939.

In letters to Chairmen Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, and Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the Senate and House Agriculture Committees, he said "it is especially important that any new legislation should not unbalance the expected balancing of the budget." Any additional obligations of the Treasury, he said, should be "backed 100 per cent by receipts from new taxes."

Processing Levy Weighed.

It is believed certain the program will bring increased costs over and above usual expenditures on the present soil conservation program. What form new taxes, needed to offset the new costs, will take is still undetermined.

Revival of the processing taxes which went out with the old AAA when the Supreme Court invalidated that act, is predicted in some quarters. Such taxes presumably would go into the general funds of the Treasury.

Observers say that when Congress gets down to drafting the crop control bill it may seek to avoid the constitutional pitfalls of the old AAA, or that it may count on the Supreme Court for a more "progressive" attitude in passing upon a new law.

Nurse, Herself A Victim, Saves Six From 'Elixir'

While 200 agents of the Federal drug office yesterday scoured the Nation for bottles of deadly sulfanilamide and diethylene "elixir" still unaccounted for, Evelyn Sharborough, a pretty 28-year-old nurse in Mount Olive, Miss., was caring for six patients surviving from 13 who were treated with the mixture.

Six of the 13 have died and Miss Sharbrough herself is the thirteenth. She said: "I took four doses of the elixir before the warning came from the manufacturers that it had proved poison."

In Washington officials of the food and drug administration spent Sunday within reach of telephones. Dr. J. J. Durrett, chief of the drug section, said the list of verified deaths from the elixir still stood at 37.

French Morocco Army Reorganized After Riots

Paris, Oct. 24 (AP).—The ministry of war today announced a complete reorganization of the French territorial army in Morocco following serious rioting by Moroccan Nationalists in the important town of Khemisset in which 65 agitators were arrested.

The disorders, blamed by many Popular Front leaders on Fascist agitation among the natives, were said to have revealed widespread agitation for removal of the Sultan of Morocco and enthronement of the Prince of Hedjaz as king.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM W. DUVALL.

Bride of 75 May Lose Pension By Marriage to Farmer of 24

Frederick, Md., Oct. 24.—Recovered from their surprise, friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Duvall last night celebrated their "reverse English" version of a May-December marriage.

Mrs. Duvall, who is 75 and an oldage pensioner, dropped her corn husking on the farm of Frank Gardner yesterday and met 24-year-old William Duvall, neighboring farmer. Together they came here, got a license and were married by the Rev. John Traver, D. D., pastor of the Evangelic Lutheran Church.

Last night the aged bride and youthful bridegroom were both hosts and guests at a dance and old-fashioned serenade. Today they were recovering.

Duvall said his plans for the future are somewhat nebulous. He may go to Baltimore, though it is probable he and his bride will remain at his present home, farming their few acres and working for neighbors.

County welfare officials said today Mrs. Duvall, who was Mrs. Nancy Seabrook before her latest matrimonial venture, likely will lose her pension.

Medium Forgets Self to Aid Customer and Lands in Jail

Jupiter, Mars and Capricorn may have had something to do with it, but if the Rev. Mrs. Carol McKinstry, spiritualist, had only turned some of her psychic powers on herself she might have saved two hours in durance vile and a $300 bond.

The Rev. Mrs. McKinstry had a woman customer Saturday and she turned the full force of her powers on this customer's troubles and thereby built up a lot of troubles of her own. It happened that her customer was Miss Alice Parrish, a policewoman, and in an anteroom sat Miss H. A. Stanberger whom the Women's Bureau had assigned to serve a wararnt on the Rev. Mrs. McKinstry for fortune telling without a license.

Somehow, the Rev. Mrs. McKinstry did not see into her own immediate future nor did she penetrate the wall between herself and the anteroom where reposed the warrant in Miss Stanberger's handbag. Possibly she was absorbed in the troubles of her customer.

At the House of Detention she was searched and soon released on $300 bond to appear in Police Court this morning for arraignment.

This embarrasing interlude was not the greatest of the Rev. Mrs. McKinstry's worries yesterday; in fact, she has been arrested twice on the same charge in six years and exonerated.

What troubles her is that going to court and all that may interrupt her current great work of taking dictation from the spirit of Rudy Valentino for a book on which it has been at work for several years. The first time she was arrested, she said, the messages ceased for some time.

As soon as she was released from the Detention Home Saturday, the spiritualist minister hurried home and thumbed through her astrological charts and references.

"And no wonder," she told herself. "Jupiter, Mars and Capricorn were all opposing my sun and moon. Some conflict was bound to take place."

An ordained spiritualist minister, she objects to paying $200 for a fortune-tellers' license.

This literary collaboration with the late Valentino, though, really has her worried. After the tie was broken by that arrest she said, she did not hear from the movie star again until the night of Thomas Meighan's death.

Hours before news of the actor's death was printed in the papers, she said, she was sitting in an automobile on Sixteenth street when Valentino's spirit appeared and announced the tragedy.

"All of a sudden I said, 'Well, if it isn't Rudy.' All he said was, 'Tom Meighan has crossed over to our world.'"

The Rev. Mrs. McKinstry was not the only spiritualist to run afoul of the law last week. Eleanor Thomas, 59, of 1416 Chapin street northwest, was arrested by Policewoman Parrish and Katherine Shearon and paid a $10 fine in Police Court Saturday for fortune telling without a license. Adeline May Atwater, 40, of 2003 O street northwest, will be arraigned today on the same charge. She was arrested by Mrs. Louise Kelley and Miss Shearon.

Nearly Every Day a Holiday In November, Survey Discloses

Practically everybody will have a holiday in November, according to the list of approaching holidays issued by the Guarantee Trust Co. of New York, which shows only four days in the month when something is not going on somewhere.

November opens with All Saints' Day, observed all the way from Algeria and Argentina through Venezuela and Yugoslavia. The only place which seems to be impervious to All Saints' Day is the District of Klaipeda, Lithuania.

November 2 is the date of the Dipavali in Ceylon, Deepavali in the Straits Settlements, Divali in Bombay, Diwali in Rangoon, Kali Puga in Calcutta and Decoration Day in Mexico.

And so it goes all through the month, each day bringing something new and different. Norway marks Thanksgiving Nov. 5, the same date as that devoted in Vatican City to the Memory of Deceased Cardinals. Archangels' Day in Roumania (Nov. 8) follows on the heels of the Proletarian Revolution's anniversary in Russia.

The most universally observed holiday in the month is Armistice Day, which is marked everywhere from Canton to the Windward Islands. Least generally observed is Nov. 23, when Frederick County, Md., celebrates Repudiation Day in memory of the colonists who defied the Stamp Act in 1765.

On Nov. 25, the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands observe Thanksgiving; Paraguay has its Constitution Day, and Iran bows its head in memory of the Martyrdom of Ali.

Farley to Talk For Mahoney In N. Y. Climax

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 24.—The New York mayorty fight entered a last bitter phase today with the Democratic Party taking the extraordinary step of calling the party's national leader, James A. Farley, to the firing line.

Farley, who too ka hand first only in a position more nominal than active, now proposes to go on the stump against the most serious second-term challenge to the New York City Democratic organization in the century and a half of its existence.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, candidate of a powerful fusion group including Republican, American Labor, Communists and Socialist parties, as well as dissident Democrats, threatens to do what no man has done before—break the Democratic machine's control twice in succession.

The Postmaster General will make a campaign speech—a rare thing for him—Tuesday night for Jeremiah T. Mahoney, the Democratic candidate.

While Farley has not sought to commit the Roosevelt administration to that candidacy, Mahoney men have tried to read into this circumstance the inferential support, at least, of Washington.

Nothing, however, has come from the White House to indicate a preference. LaGuardia, as is happens, has been a constant friend of the Roosevelt New Deal. Mahoney campaigned in the primary as a pro-Roosevelt candidate, defeating Senator Royal S. Copeland, the anti-New Deal designee of Tammany leaders, upon that and other issues.

The campaign tempo rose higher today with LaGuardia down for three major speaking engagements and Mahoney for six.

Ickes Lauds LaGuardia.

His fusion administration, LaGuardia said, had achieved more in the last four years in slum clearance and model housing than Tammany had achieved in "any previous 30 years."

Mahoney is making his race mainly upon the claim that LaGuardia is the "red front" candidate—this because the Mayor has the official support of the Communist Party—and is accusing the Mayor of benefiting from support of "godless groups."

He has sought also to link himself closely with Washington in disbursement of Federal relief funds, promising the Federal Government probably would allocate $500,000,000 to New York on projects "to be selected by himself."

While Farley and Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, a leading New Deal figure, have positively supported Mahoney, however, Secreary Ickes caused political speculation today of another sort by his repeated remarks in direct praise of LaGuardia made in connection with dedication of a sewage disposal plant here.

Equality of Women Ratified by Brazil

Brazil has become the ninth nation to ratify the Convention on the Nationality of Women, according to word received yesterday from the Brazilian Foreign Minister by the Pan-American Union.

The convention, adopted at the Pan-American conference in Montevideo, Uruguay, December 1933, provides that "there shall be no distinction based on sex as regards nationality in their (American republics') legislation or in their practice."

Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women in the Pan-American Union, expressed gratification at the news. Nations which have already approved the treaty are the United States, Chile, Mexico, Honduras, Colombia, Guatemala, Ecuador and Nicaragua.

Ashburn 4-H Club Wins Banner Again

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 24.—The 4-H Club championship banner was awarded the Ashburn Club for the third consecutive year at annual Achievement Day exercises here. Edwin Skinner, chairman of the 4-H Council, presided and Elizabeth Coleman, secretary, called the roll of clubs. The Rev. Howard Cady gave the invocation and Roscoe Rhoads led the singing.

Two outstanding club members spoke, Alice Ankers on "How My Hobby Helped Me to Win in the State Correct Dress Contest," and Archie Simpson on "My Work in Livestock Judging."

Miss Karle Bundy, home demonstration agent, reported that 185 girls enrolled in the year and 93 completed projects. William H. Cockerille, assistant farm agent, reported 116 boys enrolled and 13 attended the State short course.

Guest speakers were Miss Winifred Perry, of Vermont, and Kenneth Anderson, of South Dakota, both of whom were awarded 1937 fellowships of the Payne Fund of New York City.

Hagerstown May Try Capital Signal System

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 24.—Hagerstown officials are considering adopting a synchronized light system similar to that of Washington to relieve motor traffic congestion in the city's business section. The signals would show green for two blocks from the center of the city at the same time for a period of 35 seconds instead of the 25 seconds at one street intersection as now used. A new "walk" period of 10 seconds at eight street intersections in the downtown area has increased congestion instead of relieving it.

'I Didn't Have Enough Shots'

Mrs. Louise Compton, 20, who gave birth last Sunday to a son, on the maternity ward bed in Springfield, Ohio, where she was shot Saturday night by her husband, according to police. Compton, at right, fired five shots at his wife, one bullet striking her wrist. Police said he questioned the baby's paternity.

Society Fliers 'Bomb' Boats in New Air Game

Cameras and Flour Sacks Matched in Serio-Comic Mimic Battle.

By the United Press.

Somewhere on Long Island Sound, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Long Island's society aviators played a new game today—bombing fast motor boats with flour sacks—and "sank" five in an afternoon that was quite as perilous as it was fun.

Eighteen planes roared away from Roosevelt field, each carrying 12 "bombs," (one-pound flour sacks) in search of a squadron of ten swift motor boats whose objective was to traverse a 5¼-mile course without being hit.

Candid camera sharpshooters protected the motor boats. If a plane was photographed in such fashion that a vital part showed in the exact center of the resulting picture the air bomber was presumed to have been brought down.

The planes made five direct hits but the motor boat captains contended in every instance that they brought down the planes before the flour sacks splattered on their boats. This argument is to be settled when the negatives are developed.

The game had its serious side. It was observed closely by United States naval experts, according to George W. Rappleyea of Baltimore, sponsor of the event and a member of the board of governors of the United States Power Squadron, an organization formed among yachtsmen in 1914 and from which many navy officers were graduated in the World War. Each motor boat in today's sham battle was manned by a member of the squadron.

Rappleyea said the game developed from Italy's use of small torpedo cruisers in the Mediterranean. The cruisers are fast motor boats, each equipped with two torpedoes in the stern. In war time the little vessels would approach battleships and release their torpedoes as they backed away.

"It would be a case of a $10,000 motor boat against a $20,000,000 battleship," Rappleyea said.

Part of the purpose of today's game, he said, was to test the vulnerability of the small motor boat in air attack.

$100,000 Fire Razes Historic Jersey Church

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Oct. 24 (AP).—The First Reformed Church of Pompton Plains, where Gen. George Washington worshiped on several occasions, was razed by fire today. Loss was estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000. The 200th anniversary of the church's organization was celebrated last year.

Youth Shoots Wife in Ward With New Baby

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ohio, Oct. 24.—"I'm only sorry I didn't kill her," police quoted 23-year-old Leonard Compton today after questioning the young husband in the firing of shots last night at his 20-year-old wife in the maternity ward at City Hospital, where she gave birth to a son a week ago.

One of the bullets wounded Mrs. Compton slightly in the left wrist. Four other women, all maternity cases, were in the ward, but were unhurt.

Compton said he asked Mrs. Compton who the infant's father was, and started shooting when she failed to reply. Mrs. Compton said she had been estranged from her husband since June 13 but that he was the father of the child.

Police said charges of shooting with intent to kill would be filed against Compton Monday.

"I didn't have enough shots," Compton was quoted. "There should have been a couple more bullets in that gun."

Mrs. Compton said she and Compton were married at Covington, Ky., May 2, 1936, and had not lived together since June 13, this year. A laborer for a Springfield factory, he was fined $50 and costs July 3 on an assault and battery charge filed by his wife.

Interne M. K. Marshall, who grappled with Compton and held him until police arrived, said the young man drew a .32-caliber revolver as he stood at his wife's bedside and sent five bullets into the bed and the walls of the ward.

Australia Defeats Defense Minister

Sydney, New South Wales (Monday), Oct. 25 (AP).—Latest returns from Australia's general election today indicated defeat of Sir Robert A. Parkhill, minister of defense, who was criticized vigorously by labor.

The returns, however, confirmed re-election of Prime Minister Joseph Lyons' coalition government for another three-year term. Apparently Parkhill's defeat was the only important government loss.

Probable standing in the House of Representatives appeared: Government, 43; Labor, 31. This would be a gain of three seats for Labor. There were no figures yet available on Senate elections.

WPA to Open Children's Art Museum Here

Special Gallery Will Lean Toward 'Impressionist' Type of Work.

The colorful scratches and scrawls which children produce in drawing class may be so much waste paper to you, but to those in the know, they're art.

So seriously is juvenile art taken by the Federal Arts Project that the Children's Gallery, a musum for children, soon will be opened in the District WPA Professional Building, 816 Independence avenue southwest.

Containing sculpture and 30 or 40 drawings and paintings, which will be changed monthly, the exhibit is to consist of representative works from the various Federal arts projects in the District. More than 2,000 children per week, both white and colored, are studying art under WPA teachers in settlement houses, community houses and other centers in Washington.

The youthful artists, aged from 4 to about 14, are given great latitude in which to express their genius. The scope of their work extends from scenes vividly illustrating the Trojan War to lurid landscapes of lonely houses in the moonlight.

Perhaps the most startling opus yet to come to light here is one depicting the abduction of Helen by Paris. The hero, firmly grasping a rigidly horizontal Helen by her golden tresses, marches resolutely toward a door marked "Exit."

The more subjective the drawing is the better William Dove, supervisor of the District FAP, likes it. A carefully drawn swimming pool which observed all the laws of perspecitve (more or less) failed to earn the praise given a conglomeration of geometrical designs washed in a nightmarish sea of colors.

"The simple, untrained, direct perception of children produces things which we overtrained adults fail to see," explained Mr. Dove.

The museum itself will on its completion represent the most modern ideas in displaying art. Instead of hanging from hooks or nails, the pictures, laid under glass flat against the walls, will be supported by moldings.

Russell Parr, regional director of the FAP, stated yesterday that the pictures will have the appearance of a decorative band running around the walls of the two-room museum. The pretentiousness of old-fashioned framing will be eliminated, he said, by a simple mat surrounding each picture.

Mr. Parr hopes the museum will eventually display works of art from other WPA projects throughout the country. In addition to painting and sculpture, ceramics and even modernistically designed toys will be shown.

The museum is scheduled for opening early next month, but as yet no pictures have been hung.

'Lost Battalion' Survivor, Ill for Year, Dead Here

S. W. Treakle, survivor of the "Lost Battalion," Infantry unit isolated for five days in the Argonne Forest in October, 1918, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital. He was 47 years old.

Treakle, resident of Norfolk and well known in the Tidewater section of Virginia, had been ill for more than a year. Serving as a sergeant, he was wounded several times in the war.

The incident of the Lost Battalion was one of the most spectacular events of the war. Seven companies from the 307th and 308th Infantry regiments, together with elements from the 306th Machine Gun Battalion, broke through the enemy line and then lost contact with supporting troops. For five days their commander Maj. Charles White Whittlesey, refused to surrender. At the end of that time, when support finally arrived, exactly 194 of the original 554 officers and men in the command were able to march.

Funeral services for Treakle will be held at Mathews, Va., at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in the Baptist Church Cemetery there.

3 Street Robberies Net Thugs $31.10

Footpads and a pocketbook snatcher collected $31.10 in three robberies here yesterday. The dime was the loot in one haul.

Lloyd T. Johnson, 2123 F street northwest, was robbed of $22 by two men who accosted him near his home.

Johnson said one of the men was armed with a shotgun which he kept partly concealed under his coat. Both men fled through an alley, Johnson told police.

Bound for church yesterday Edith Kinard, 3221 Connecticut avenue northwest, had her pocketbook snatched from her arm by a white boy about 13 years old. The purse contained about 10 cents, she said.

Harry Noyes, 734 Hamilton street northwest, was robbed of $9 by a colored footpad who attacked him in front of his home. The bandit threw him to the street and held him while rifing his pockets, Noyes stated.

Pastor Takes Charge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., Oct. 24.—The Rev. F. C. Saneholtz, of Dayton, Ohio, has assumed his work here as pastor of the Pilgrim Holiness Church, succeeding the Rev. Elmer D. Joy, who has been made superintendent for his denomination in this district.

Health Post Filled.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 24.—Mrs. J. W. Burgess was elected treasurer of the Page County Tuberculosis Association here last night to succeed Mrs. W. W. Lincoln, who has served as treasurer for a number of years, and who offered her resignation.

Impressionistic Art of Children to Be Exhibited

"Puppets," by 8-year-old Rogan Bachman, of the Horace Mann School, catches the interest of William Dove, supervisor of the District Federal Art Project which is opening a gallery for exhibition of paintings by children here.

D. C. Blockaded for an Hour In Futile Vigil for N. Y. 'Mob'

Tip on Guns Causes Search of Hundreds of Cars at Bridges, But Police Decide Hunted Were Merely Hunters.

Whether the entire police force yesterday was called upon to search for three New York gangsters or just three business men off on a hunting trip was a matter of speculation at Police Headquarters last night.

The fruitless hunt began shortly after noon when W. A. Washington, colored, 1232 Fairmont street northwest, was stopped near Tenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest by three men in a new, expensive car bearing New York tags.

They asked Washington if he could help them repair a leaking gasoline line. Employed at the Treasury Department garage, Washington agreed to aid the men.

But when he looked into the rear of the sedan, all thought of work left him. For, he told police, there were three machine guns on the floor.

After seeing the guns, Washington refused to help the men and they drove their sputtering machine west on Rhode Island avenue.

Washington raced for the Fourth Precinct Station. He told his story and police immediately sent scout cars and armed detective cruisers to block all bridges and highways leading out of the city.

Statoined more than an hour, in which time they stopped and searched hundreds of cars, the policemen finally were called off the hunt by Detective Capt. Ira E. Keck. The suspicious car was thought to have gotten out of town before the blockade was established.

Although Washington insisted the car contained machine guns, several police officials are inclined to believe the "desperadoes" were merely hunters with shotguns piled in back of the machine.

Posse Catches Human 'Fox' to Improve Skill

California Sheriff Frees Prisoner; a Hundred Riders Have 'Sport.'

By the Associated Press.

Martinez, Calif., Oct. 24.—More than 100 hard-riding Contra Costa County citizens hunted a volunteer human "fox" today for what Sheriff John A. Miller called the improvement of man-catching technique, and a $20 prize.

Mrs. Juanita Shaw, armed with a lariat, caught the quarry.

"This is not a gag folks," Sheriff Miller told the hunters assembled at dawn, "but something to benefit the county. What if a convict took to the country? Unless we all know how to go after him, he'll be gone for good."

He distributed county maps and told his "posse" the fugitive, a county jail prisoner released for a few hours, was hidden somewhere in a ravine-slashed, brush-covered area of hundreds of square miles.

The "fox," with the sheriff's watch in his pocket to gauge the approach of the noon deadline after which he could not be captured, kept watch for hours as horses crashed through underbrush and toiled over hills near his hiding place. Five minutes before he would have been "safe," he ventured from his lair. Out of the brush galloped Mrs. Juanita Shaw, her lariat swinging. The "fox" started to run, but the lariat settled about his shoulders.

Everybody agreed it was great sport.

500,000 Facing Loss of Jobs to Cotton Picker

Mechanical Device Not Expected to Take South by Storm.

By the United Press.

The Works Progress Administration, always watching for possible new sources of unemployment, found last night that the mechanical cotton picker may throw 500,000 workers out of their jobs wthin the next decade.

A report of the WPA research division, however, stressed that there was little reason to believe the mechanical picker would take the cotton belt by storm.

"As long as there is an abundance of cotton pickers willing to pick cotton for 75 cents to $1 per 100 pounds, and as long as other prices maintain their present alignment, the mechanical picker can not be expected to take the cotton belt by storm," the report said.

The report said that operating expenses and losses from discoloration and less clean pickings by machine raised the cost of mechanical picking of 100 pounds of seed cotton to $1.65 compared with $1 for hand picking in the Mississippi delta last year.

Improvement of a successful picker which would gather bolls from two rows at a time and could be operated by a single worker, the report said, would speed up the mechanization of the cotton harvest. Experts estimated that such development would require "several years."

"Successful one and two-row machines, if developed, might, in the course of perhaps 10 years, be applied to an upper limit of about half of the present cotton acreage and displace a maximum of 2,000,000 hand pickers for the picking season of about 40 work-days," the report said. "The displacement of half a million pickers within a period of 5 to 10 years appears more probable, however."

District to Get Long-Awaited Finance Report

Tax Conference Expected to Hear Forecast of 7 Year Revenue.

Possibility that contents of the long awaited statistical report, projecting District revenue and expenditures over the next seven years, will be revealed this week, appeared likely today as Commissioners prepared for another tax conference scheduled for tomorrow.

It is believed that the Commissioners will reconsider their silence rule, established Saturday by Commissioner Hazen, after District Auditor Daniel Donovan accused Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal of divulging confidential information given the tax committee.

Hazen's ruling ordered that all information on the revenue study come only from Commissioners meeting as a board.

Seal, who hotly denied the charge that he had violated any confidence, will probably register protest against the silence ruling at tomorrow's meeting.

Meanwhile, the report is still officially a secret, although copies are in hands of a number of District officials and part of it was revealed last week.

No decision has yet been reached by Commissioners on a major tax to replace the business privilege levy and the 25 cent increase in the realty tax.

Japanese Plane Kills Briton on Shanghai Road

Tokyo Claims Big Advance But Chinese Cling to Chapei Area.

Four times the airman swooped at groups of foreigners seeking recreation along Keswick road, outside the International Settlement but inside the British defense lines. Many were on horseback, others walking.

The fifth time the airman plunged toward a British defense position, McGowan was hit; other British soldiers dived behind sandbags. Then, said a sentry, a British naval officer ordered the men to reply with automatic rifles, which they did.

"We were under orders not to fire unless ordered by an officer or we would have fired sooner," the sentry explained. He said six horses were killed by the Japanese plane.

The Americans endangered, according to a report to Consul General Gauss, were H. D. Rodger, prominent attorney, formerly of Hammond, N. Y.; R. K. Smith, of Montclair, N. J., Shanghai manager of the United States Life Insurance Co.; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Sprague, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Peggy Arnold, of New London, Conn.

American Flees to Bush.

No foreigner except McGowan was injured but four Chinese nearby were reported killed and six wounded.

Rodger said the attack was "plain murder." He said more than 20 men and women riders, "dressed in all kinds of sports clothes in which it was impossible to mistake them for soldiers," were scattered along the roadway.

"When the plane came down I dived into the bushes," said Rodger. "Others did likewise. It was a miracle none of us was shot."

Japanese planes carried out their first night raid on Hankow, 600 miles up the Yangtze valley, causing considerable damage but no casualties.

Eight Japanese bombers attacked the railway between Canton and Kowloon (Honkong) in the far south, destroyed a passenger train, killed two Chinese and wounded four. Heavy damage was done to railway property at several points.

On the hop across the English Channel she had fought a raging gale that cut off the Channel islands from communication with the mainland, pitched small ships about and flooded the streets of Portsmouth.

Dispatches from Baghdad said that Broadbent, whose plane was without a radio, arrived there after being forced down in the desert 60 miles away. He borrowed a donkey from Arabs and rode to a station 4 miles away, where he obtained enough fuel to carry him to Baghdad. He said that unless the headwings subsided he might abandon the flight.

Won Harmon Trophy.

Jean Batten and Howard Hughes, American high-speed transcontinental flier, were awarded the Harmon international trophies as the world's outstanding aviators of 1936.

Miss Batten's award, presented in Paris in February, 1937, was in recognition of her record-breaking flight from England to New Zealand. She made the flight in 11 days and 57 minutes.

She was the first woman to make a solo hop over the South Atlantic.

In May, 1934, Miss Batten set a record for women fliers when she flew from England to Australia in 14 days 23 hours and 25 minutes, cutting four and a half days off the previous women's record, set by Amy Johnson, wife of Capt. James A. Mollison.

District Magicians To Stage Benefit For School Lunch

The Citizens' Committee for Feeding Hungry School Children last night announced details of the benefit magic shows to be presented the week of November 1 by the local chapter of the Society of American Magicians. The shows will be held twice daily, at 2:30 p. m. and 8:30 p. m., at the Belasco Theater.

Last night the committee mailed out letters to 10,000 Washington theater-goers, soliciting their support of the shows. Plans also were completed for circulars to be distributed in the public schools. The 60,000 school children will be asked to take the circulars home to their parents.

George Vivian, prominent stage director, will supervise the shows. Performers will include Theodore T. Golden, Charles W. Townsley and C. C. Slayton.

The magic shows will close the committee's drive for a $100,000 fund with which to provide free hot lunches for the District's 5,100 needy elementary school children.

This week's big event will be the charity ball at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow evening. Brook Johns will be master of ceremonies. Professional entertainment will be furnished by the Capital and the Earle Theaters.

U. S. Hearing Week Will Begin Tonight

National Hearing Week will begin tonight with a demonstration of lip-reading in the clubrooms of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, 1116 Vermont avenue. The demonstration is to be conducted by Rosalie Kaminsky, who holds lip-reading classes in the club Monday and Thursday evenings.

Walter S. Ufford, former general secretary of the associated charities of Washington will address tonight's meeting on employment difficulties of the hard of hearing.

Other speakers include George R. Dickson, president of the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, and Betty C. Wright, executive director of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing.

Pastor Advocates Vote Before War

Speaking at evening service of the Columbia Heights Christian Church, Clinton N. Howard, general superintendent of the International Reform Federation, last night advocated an amendment to the Constitution which would require an immediate national referendum before America could participate in any foreign war.

Howard said, "This does not mean that America shall not join with other nations by every method short of a resort to military force to stop the international banditry now being imposed upon pacifist China by militarized, mercenary and merciless Japan."

Argument's End

Nothing, in all life, seems so easy to start as the argument about whether Uncle Sam is properly educating the Indians. More than once, during every Congress, the Capitol's halls are full of the feathers of Poor Lo, who complains like the wind of the schools and all the this and that which he claims torments him in his wild domain.

Then the air is full of counter-statements from the Office of Indian Affairs and after a few days Poor Lo departs and the atmosphere cools off, sooner or later to become agitated again.

The other day, we were reading "Indians At Work," published by the Office of Indian Affairs, when what was thought an interesting note came to eye. This held that many Minnesota Chippewa Indian children had been given "a camping experience" through co-operation of the Indian Service, the State of Minnesota, the WPA and the War Department. The children, it was related, showed underweight and improved during the camp experience."

This we record, with the observation that it seemed pretty queer to speak of giving an Indian "a camp experience," because the popular notion has the Indian living in camps as a usual habitation. It was intended as nothing more than a light paragraph; upon word of honor there was no intention of reopening the argument. It will reopen soon enough anyhow; just as soon as Congress reopens and the Indians can corral enough car fare to get here.

Coals to Newcastle

Inevitably, from that innocent paragraph, there comes a letter, saying:

"For two years I worked in the (Indian) Service as a teacher. I learned a lot about the policies of the Washington Office, and their effect on the Indian in his own environment.

"For example, on the Navajo reservation in New Mexico and Arizona, the emphasis on teaching has been turned from the three 'R's' to 'native cultures.' The Navajo children taught to make rugs! Navajo rugs have already been famous, and for the white man even to attempt to teach them what they do so well is ridiculous. The boys are taught to kill and skin sheep. Sheep are the livelihood of the Navajos, and a boy before he ever attends school knows more about the process than a white boy ever learns.

"The women are taught to cure and tan skins! And how to build outdoor ovens! And the patriarchs of the tribe complain with just reason: 'You teach our children to read and write, we will teach them the rest better than you could.'"

"The Zunis and the Pueblos are taught to make pottery and baskets! The Navajos are taught geometric designing! All, of course, at great expense to the taxpayer; and with no great advantage to the Indian who, I believe, is really anxious to learn those things which will really benefit him. It is the new policy of the present administration of the service. And, on the Navajo reservation, at least, the Indians are revolting by refusing to send their children to the white man's school."

Rebuttal

Some of the articles in "Indians at Work" might be used in rebuttal of the letter. "Various tribes pass resolutions affirming faith in the Indian reorganization act," says one headline . . . Then there are pictures galore of apparently happy-faced Indians at work in the white man's way . . . And a lot of letters from apparently contented Indians . . . And with this concluding paragraph from a statement by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs: "Indian policy must go ahead, and with greater resourcefulness, finding and using the potent elements that yet live in the Indian spirit and social memory."

But it is too much to hope for argument's end.

France Ready To Use Force, Premier Says

Chautemps Offers Peace to Faith-Keepers, Holds Army at 'High Pitch.'

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 24.—Premier Camille Chautemps, delivering a major declaration on the policy of his People's Front government, warned today that France was determined to defend her vital interests by force if need be.

The premier tempered his declaration with an offer of peace to "all nations which will prove by their acts their desire to keep their engagements loyally."

Chautemps spoke at Chateauroux before the Congress of the Central Federation of his Radical-Socialist Party, one of the traditional Sunday political meetings in France which ministers use as sounding boards for cabinet policy.

Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos was striving to keep in close accord with Great Britain and in sympathy with the United States, chautemps said, while Defense Minister Edouard Daladier was keeping the army at a high pitch "to give peace the guarantees of force."

"I hope especially in the grievous affair of Spain this pacific, prudent and courageous action will succeed in cutting short the violations of justice which cannot be renewed without constraining France and Britain to renew their liberty of action."

The premier's declaration recalled French insistence that unless the nonintervention committee soon pulled foreign troops out of Spain France would open her frontier to aid the Spanish government and take action to protect her lines of empire in the Mediterranean against alleged Italian occupation of Mallorca.

Coon Dog's Buyer Now Fears He Got Just Rabbit Hound

Queenie, the coon hound whose former owner, Alonzo Whitlock, wept when he sold her ten days ago, at the Fredericksburg dog mart, may be just a rabbit hound, according to her new owner, W. M. Knight.

After a week on a farm in St. Marys County, Md., Queenie's hunting ability still is open to question, Knight said yesterday. "Queenie acts as though she never had gone hunting before. Apparently the dog never has had any training," he said.

But one question has been cleared up. When he bought Queenie, Knight estimated her possible age as from 6 to 60. Since Queenie has been working on a month's supply of food in the country, it has appeared that only a young dog could eat so much and know so little about hunting.

"The dog must be about a year old," Knight said yesterday.

O'Mahoney Revives Anti-Trust Plans

By the Associated Press.

Now that talk of checking "monopoly" is in the air, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, sees a chance to make some real progress with his favorite proposal, Federal licensing of corporations.

O'Mahoney has long proposed requiring interstate corporations to apply for Federal charters which would restrict harmful practices.

He contends that monopoly flourishes under State corporation charters and that it has been allowed to "grow apace by permitting State corporations to dominate our national economy" through "merger and overcapitalization."

American Seized On Photographing Kiev Street Scene

Moscow (Monday), Oct. 25 (U.P.).—State Senator John Phillips, of Banning, Calif., was arrested at Kiev and held in jail for one hour by Soviet police on charges of illegally using a camera, he reported on his arrival in Moscow last night.

Phillips, en route to Berlin on a tour of Europe, said that when he arrived in Kiev he inquired what photographs he was permitted to take and followed the instructions given him by tourist bureau officials.

He said he was arrested when a Russian, acting under instructions published in newspapers to report anyone seen photographing, informed police that he was taking pictures of a street scene.

55,000 CAR - BUS RIDERS

Travel at 3½ Cents a Ride on Weekly Passes

Our 55,000 customers who buy weekly passes average 36 rides a week on each pass, which is 3½ cents a ride. Over 20,000 who used the old $1 pass have quit buying passes since we had to raise the price to $1.25. They now pay the 7½-cent token fare, riding less often. We raised the price two bits to pay higher wages to car and bus operators. The labor cost in each ride has risen half a cent in three years.

This is printed to remind old and new customers that the weekly pass is good on any regular-fare car or bus in the District, for as many rides as the buyer, or any member of his family, or any friend or employe, wishes to make with it, between 5 a. m. Sunday and 5 a. m. the next Sunday.

Low priced riding on passes brings in some badly needed revenue we would not get otherwise, by filling empty seats during non-rush hours. You can buy a pass on any car or bus. At $1.25 it is a real bargain.

Clergy Divides On Merger Plan Of Episcopate

Views of Church Leaders Range From Enthusiasm to Skepticism.

Divergent views on the proposed "organic union" of the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches were expressed to The Post by prominent Washington clergymen and a distinguished visitor in interviews ranging from hearty approval to extreme skepticism on both sides.

Steps toward the suggested merger were approved in Cincinnati last week by the Triennial General Convention of the Episcopal Church.

"The spirit of fellowship and cooperation between the church bodies has steadily increased in recent years," commented the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, on his return from the Cincinnati convention. "The Presbyterian and Episcopal churches are already one in creed and faith. I do not consider difference of ceremonials and orders an insurmountable obstacle to their union."

Dr. Smith Skeptical.

Dissimilarity in the government of the two churches, however, was viewed as almost insuperable by Washington's senior Episcopal rector, Dr. Herbert Scott Smith, of St. Margaret's Church, Connecticut avenue and Bancroft place. "I am afraid little or nothing will come of the proposed conference," Dr. Smith said, "for tucked snugly away at the heart of the outstretched olive branch is the historic Episcopate, which, with its implications, I am reasonably sure the Presbyterian church will not accept."

A delegate to the Cincinnati convention, the Right Rev. Noel Porter, Bishop of Sacramento, who recently visited Washington, enthusiastically indorsed the move.

From the Presbyterian side, objections were expressed by the Rev. Freeley Rohrer, pastor of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, 201 Fourth street southeast. "My fear," the Rev. Mr. Rohrer said, "is that the Episcopalians wish to absorb the Presbyterian Church and have us all become Episcopalians. I don't think that would be wise or possible. I am for union of all the churches if some fair and reasonable basis could be established. We are near enough on theological grounds; but the church forms and government are very different."

Co-operation Stressed.

"Every earnest student of the Christian Church," Dr. Palmer stated, "must welcome any suggestion of closer union of the church parties . . . Usually such a consummation requires preliminary steps leading to it. The fact that this has come so suddenly makes one question whether it can go on to a speedy conclusion."

Actual union is less important than co-operation in the opinion of Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. "I am in favor of anything tending toward a better understanding in reaching a common ground," observed Dr. Hollister. "I don't know if union is possible, but the study of it would be wholesome. The main thing is co-operation with one another, whether or not the churches finally unite."

Difficulties—but not unsurmountable ones—were seen by Dr. Alfred E. Barrows, pastor of Eastern Presbyterian Church, Sixth street and Maryland avenue northeast. "Things like this are happening with a good many denominations," Dr. Barrows said. "We have always had friendly relations with the the Episcopalians and it may be possible to work out a compromise in the form of government. Even now, the churches are working together in marvelous ways that the public is unaware of. There are a good many problems, but they are not hopeless.

At least one enthusiastic proponent of the scheme was found among the Presbyterians, Dr. Albert J. McCartney, of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, Connecticut avenue and N street, declared he thought "it is a very fine gesture, and I welcome it. It may take years to get a program we can work together on, but there are so many things in common. Union of Presbyterians and Episcopalians is devoutly to be wished.

A deputy to the Cincinnati convention, Dr. Oliver Hart, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, 321 Sixteenth street, said "I am heartily in sympathy with the action taken. A committee has been in negotiation with leaders of the Presbyterian Church for some time. It was desired that the general convention express hope for real organic unity with them. Now, instead of a mere hazy wish, we have on record a definite desire. This is a distinct step forward."

"I don't know any finer group of Christians with whom we might unite than the Presbyterians," said the Rev. William R. Moody, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Third and A streets southeast, and chairman of the Department of Religious Education of the Diocese.

Although he would not comment on the convention's proposals, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of Washington Cathedral, observed that the Episcopal and Presbyterian churches have much in common. He added that his father was for many years a vestryman in the Episcopal Church at Lenox, Mass., and at the same time deacon of a Presbyterian church in New York City.

Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas' Church, 1772 Church street northwest, said, "Any move toward a more united front of Christian bodies must be in the right direction and suggestive of the ideal . . . I recognize the blessing of God on the work of my brethren elsewhere and I honor them in what they are accomplishing. I wish we might be united in a closer bond of fellowship, but I am not wise enough to say how this can be accomplished or what we ought to give up in the desire to attain that end."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Preventing a Discard.

The takeout double is one of the most effective means by which a player whose opponent has opened the bidding can show a strong hand. The takeout double says in effect: "Partner name your best suit, even if your hand is very weak. My hand is strong enough to assure a reasonable safe contract." It follows, therefore, that when the doubler's partner has a hand strong in either distribution or high cards he should try for game.

In today's hand South was perfectly correct in looking for game in one of his majors, especially in view of North's free rebid of two notrump following his earlier takeout double. That the contract was defeated has little bearing on its soundness. South had an excellent play for his contract, and only a bad break plus excellent defense prevented him from making it.

West, dealer.

West opened the King of clubs, and East signaled for a continuation with his eight-spot. West cashed the Ace of clubs, and East completed the echo by dropping the deuce. West felt pretty sure that his partner had the Queen of hearts and that another club lead would enable him to win a trick with that card. But instead of leading a third round of clubs at once West indulged in a little thought.

South had shown great length in the major suits and had already showed up with two clubs. It was entirely possible that he had a singleton diamond and that he would discard that diamond on an immediate club ruff. It was imperative therefore that West cash the Ace of diamonds before leading his third round of clubs. Despite the fact that he was setting up dummy's King, West laid down the Ace of diamonds at trick three. He next led a third round of clubs and East trumped with his Queen, to set the contract.

South was very unfortunate. Had the Queen of hearts been in the West hand, or had West failed to cash the Ace of diamonds, he would have made his contract.

Dr. Paul Putski, an assistant professor at George Washington University, reported to police yesterday that a second-story burglar had stolen jewelry valued at $440 from his home at 4524 Garfield street northwest.

The intruder entered the house through a second-story window some time Saturday night, Dr. Putski said. The most valuable article missing was a diamond brooch worth $200.

Playboy Prince Held in Revel Slaying of Girl

Rose said she screamed when she saw the bloody body of her sister, and then asked: "What happened?" The prince, she said, shook his head, set the dying girl in a chair and called the Emergency Hospital.

When the Emergency Hospital ambulance arrived, the others were desperately trying to stem the flow of blood with heavy towels wrapped around the girl's neck. Police, who arrived at almost the same time, said the prince met them at the door and said calmly:

"I'm willing to take the rap."

He pointed to the chair where the girl was propped, and said: "There she is."

Later at police headquarters Kawanankoa assertedly denied any knowledge of events leading up to the girl's death.

Second Such Case.

Police said it was the second time in five years Kawananakoa has been involved in the death of a girl companion. On August 16, 1932, Felicia Connors was killed in an automobile accident. Prince David was arrested and later pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter. He was given a five years suspended sentence, according to Probation Officer John R. Troche.

The probation period has not expired.

Prince David, 32 years old, husky and handsome, is the son of Princess Abigail Kawananakoa, widow of Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole, son of King Kalakaua, last male monarch to sit on the Hawaiian throne. Through his grandfather, young Prince Koke came rightly by his love of bright lights and good times which have put so sorry a period to the royal line of Hawaii.

King's Poker Profitable.

King Kalakaua, who ruled from 1873 to his death in 1891, ended in a blaze of bright lights a reign which started auspiciously enough. In his last years he spent much of his time in San Francisco and on vessels plying between the California port and Hawaii, eating, drinking, making love of sorts and playing prodigious amounts of poker.

His poker, so they'll tell you, was all in Kalakaua's favor. When he won he raked in cash with many a kingly chuckle. When he lost he paid magnificently in I. O. U.'s.

Typical of these is one now in the possession of a Western newspaperman. It reads, "I. O. U. $50. Kalakaua, Rex."

"Koke" Has Great Fortune.

Prince Koke lost whatever real claim he might have had to the Hawaiian throne when the throne itself went down in 1893 with Queen Liliuokalani, whose chief contribution to posterity was "Aloha Oe." Though the throne to which Prince Koke was born heir was but a nebulous thing, the fortune he inherited is reported to be immense. They say he has an annual revenue of something more than $300,000 with which to pursue the brittle pleasures which twice have brought him cheek to jowl with violent death.

Between dissolute Kalakaua and playboy David Kawananakoa there looms his father, Prince Jonah Kuhio, solid citizen, patriot and for 20 years delegate in Congress for Hawaii. Prince Kuhio served from his first election in 1903 until his death in 1922 when his princely son was but 17 years old.

Echoes of Massie Incident.

"Flapper's Half Acre," where Prince David's beautiful companion died last night, is within a short distance of the scene of Hawaii's most celebrated crime, the Massie case, which shook the entire United States and resulted in reorganization of the Hawaiian police department.

A Hawaiian youth, accused of assaulting Mrs. Thalia Massie, wife of a United States Navy officer, Lieut. Thomas J. Massie, was killed. Mrs. Massie's mother, Mrs. Granville Fortescue; Lieut. Massie and two naval enlisted men were later convicted of manslaughter.

Boy, 17, Is Sought In Slaying of His Step-Grandfather

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—J. E. Bean, 50, an electric crane operator at the Norfolk Navy Yard, was shot and killed at his home here today. His step-grandson, Raymond Francis Miller, 17, son of Leuty Miller, of Baltimore, was being sought by police.

Cause of the shooting was not known. Coroner E. T. Glover quoted Mrs. Bean as saying Bean and the boy were on good terms and were joking with each other at breakfast.

Later, she said the boy confronted her and her husband with a pistol and told them they moved he would shoot. He had a "wild stare" in his eyes, she said. Her husband, she said, slammed the door of the room, and as it closed young Miller fired through the panel, the bullet striking Bean in the heart. The boy fled.

Violence Is Renewed In Holy Land Protest

Jerusalem, Oct. 24 (U.P.).—Renewed violence in protest to the British plan to partition the Holy Land was reported tonight. A bomb blew up the railroad tracks near Gaza this evening, a few minutes before a train reached the spot. There were no casualties. A young Jew was seriously wounded by gun fire in the mixed Jewish-Arabian quarter of Jerusalem.

Green Dampens Labor Pacifists On Parley Eve welcome this first move on the part of those who have left us to come back."

Observers believed that the tone of the last half of this statement, reflecting Green's own stand-pate insistence that Lewis repent, recant and capitulate, would stand as an effective bar to the open door policy expressed in the announcement.

Lewis, just as inflexibly set in his belief that industrial unionization is the modern method of labor organizing, cannot logically give in to Green's demands, informed quarters noted.

But the pressure of the public for a halt in the destructive civil warfare in labor, and the pressure of the rank-and-file workers on both sides for a productive peace that will send the 8,000,000 unionized workers to the polls in a direct attempt to elect candidates in 1938 favorable to labor interests, must be answered in some manner.

Therefore the meetings that begin today will search desperately for a face-saving solution.

The sessions, which begin at 10 a. m. in the Willard Hotel, will be attended by Harrison, Woll and Buginazet for the federation, and by the following ten men for the C. I. O.: Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Harvey Fremming, Oil Field and Refinery Workers; James B. Carey, United Electrical and Radio Workers; S. H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers; Homer Martin, United Automobile Workers; M. J. Quill, United Transport Workers; Joseph Curran, National Maritime Union; Abraham Flaxer, State, County and Municipal Workers; Sidney Hillman and David Dubinsky, representing the C. I. O.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

District of Columbia Chapter American Guild of Organists presents Marcel Dupre in recital Sunday afternoon at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University. Program: Fantasia and Fugue in G minor (Bach), Concerto No. 2 in B flat (Handel), Fantasia in F minor No. 1 (Mozart), "Comes Autumn Time" (Leo Sowerby), "Ballade" for piano and organ (Dupre), Allegro and Fugue from Sonata No. 3 (Mendelssohn), Introduction and Passacaglia (Reger), "Up the Saguenay" (Russell), Musette (Ibert), "Angelus" (Dupre), Prelude and Fugue in A flat (Dupre), Improvisation.

How greatly music lovers appreciate the opportunities provided by the local chapter of the American Guild of Organists for the hearing of distinguished masters of the console was shown yesterday by the attendance at the recital given by Marcel Dupre, successor to Charles Marie Widor in the Church of St. Sulpice, Paris. The crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the Catholic University was crowded to capacity, and many auditors stood throughout the program.

M. Dupre is no stranger to the United States, his previous tours having made his virtuosity familiar from the Eastern to the Western Coast, and his appearances are ever welcomed by old and new admirers. One of the supreme organists of our age, he has excellencies that are self-evident in both technique and artistry. Such a talent as his has inestimable value in keeping before the public the primacy of the organ among solo instruments.

His program yesterday was designed to demonstrate both the orchestral and the lyrical functions of the organ. From the eighteenth century composers he chose Bach—the "Great" G minor fantasia and fugue—Handel, represented by a transcription of the second concerto for organ and orchestra; and Mozart, exemplified by the seldom-heard first fantasia in F minor. This fantasia, one of a pair written on commission during the last year of his life, was meant to be played on a clockwork instrument fashionable in the Vienna of 1791, a predecessor of our player piano. Its beauty and tenderness are quite inconsistent with cogs and gears.

Pertaining to the later German school were the two movements from Mendelssohn's third organ sonata, and Max Reger's scholarly introduction and passacaglia in D minor, an admirable work by a versatile and somewhat neglected composer. Two American composers were on the list: Alexander Russell with the descriptive "Up the Saguenay" from the "St. Lawrence Sketches," and Leo Sowerby with his rhapsodic "Comes Autumn Time."

With the exception of a graceful musette by Jacques Ibert, modern French composers had as their representative M. Dupre himself. In the performance of his fanciful and interesting "Ballade" for piano and organ, he was assisted by his daughter, Marguerite. Of his other compositions, he added a suave "Angelus" and a prelude and fugue in A flat melodically attractive and contrapuntally adroit. His closing improvisation on submitted themes was, as usual, an admirable proof of his sound musicianship, his quick imagination, and his skill in extemporaneous construction.

Valparaiso, Chile, Oct. 24 (AP).—An airliner with five persons aboard was feared tonight to have crashed somewhere along the north coast of Chile between Copiapo and Antofagasta. A day-long search for the missing plane by civilian and military aviators proved fruitless. It was operated by the National Airline of Chile.

When a cold strikes . . . don't take needless risks

Treat Colds This PROVED Way

WHY experiment? Vicks VapoRub has been doubly proved for you . . . proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind; further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (See full details in each VapoRub package.)

Only Vicks give you such proof.

VapoRub is the direct external treatment. No "dosing"—no risk of stomach upsets. Simply massage it on the throat, chest, and back (as illustrated).

Relief starts almost at once. You begin to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub starts working direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time, its medicated vapors—released by the warmth of the body—are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

THERE'S MAGIC in a Long Distance telephone call.

Yet to thousands of people it is an everyday commonplace matter, familiar as the making of a local call.

It's so cheap, too. After 7 in the evening, and all day Sundays, the lowest rates are in effect. Make a call to some out-of-town relative or friend tonight. Ask "Long Distance" for the rate. You'll probably be mightily surprised to find how low it is.

Army and Navy Veteran Succumbs at 74 in Baltimore.

A colorful career that embraced service in the Army, Navy and Metropolitan Police Force ended with the death in Baltimore yesterday of Capt. Joseph S. Van Fleet, 74, formerly well-known resident of Washington.

Entering the Washington police force in the old Eighth Precinct 53 years ago, Capt. Van Fleet saw active duty in "Hell's Bottom," Twelfth and Q streets northwest, considered at that time one of the most dangerous sections of Washington.

Known as a fearless officer, Van Fleet, who emerged from the force a lieutenant, refused to be transferred to a quieter prerinct. Participating in the manhunt for the notorious Dorsey Foultz, Van Fleet, among others, is credited with chasing his quarry into a sewer, where Foultz disappeared—never to be apprehended.

Searching for further adventure, Van Fleet resigned his police commission and entered the Navy, becoming a lieutenant in 1898. He then obtained a position as letter carrier in the Washington Postoffice and within a few years was appointed superintendent of carriers.

The restaurant, livery and private detective business engaged Van Fleet's attention at various times until the World War, when he was commissioned captain of ordnance. He retired from the Army about two years after the armistice.

Born in Providence, R. I., Van Fleet lived in Washington well over 50 years and had a wide circle of friends here. He was a member of Costello Post, American Legion, and of Washington Lodge, No. 15, B. P. O. E. A widower, he died at the home of his nephew and namesake, at 2317 Lauretta avenue, Baltimore. Funeral services will be held at the W. W. Chambers suburban funeral home, Riverdale, Md., at 11 a. m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Loudoun Park Cemetery, Baltimore.

Served as Secretary of 31 State and National Conventions.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 24.—Lafayette Blanchard Gleason, 74, secretary of the New York State Republican Committee since 1906, died today after an illness of nine weeks.

He had suffered complications which followed an abdominal operation.

Gleason had been secretary of seven successive national Republican conventions. His son, Gordon, was with him when he died.

Gleason started going to Republican conventions in 1887, and attended every Republican national convention from 1896, when McKinley was nominated, until 1936. He had attended every Republican State convention since 1888, and had served as secretary of every State convention since 1892.

In all, he was secretary to 31 State and national conventions, calling delegates' rolls hundreds of times, announcing the names of 19 Presidential and gubernatorial candidates. He lost count, long ago of how many ballots he had announced.

"In the last few years, we of law enforcement have shown that it is possible to match in actual life anything of a scientific nature which has been dreamed about by the fiction writer in relation to crime," Hoover said.

Our Two Police Forces.

New demands for consolidation of Washington's two largest police forces are a logical sequel to the recent brutal attack upon a young woman in Rock Creek Park. Assaults of this kind are encouraged by inadequate policing. And one foremost reason why policing is inadequate is the division of available officers into two forces.

If the Metropolitan and United States Park Police were assigned to separate but contiguous areas, the results of divided authority would not be so distressing. Each might then serve efficiently in its own bailiwick. But under present conditions the very limited personnel of the Park Police force must extend its activities over nearly 700 park areas scattered throughout the city. Adequate patrolling under these circumstances is impossible.

Under unified direction much of this lost motion could be avoided. The staff would still be in need of additional men, but assurance could then be given that new officers would be used to the best advantage. The District can not hope to stamp out the atrocities of perverts in the parks until enforcement of law in those areas becomes the business of all Washington policemen instead of a small, segregated fraction of them.

It has been suggested that park boundaries might be ignored so that the two forces could function side by side in public recreational areas. But that might accentuate the confusion. Overlapping jurisdiction is never conducive to efficiency. Even under present conditions, policemen from the two forces have been known to stand and argue over their respective obligations to arrest a law violator crossing the street into one of Washington's numerous tiny parks. The only way to eliminate such conflicts is to make all policemen in the city answerable to one authority.

Congress would doubtless be glad to effect this needed reform if it were recommended by the heads of the two agencies. The Metropolitan police are eager for the change. Since the Park Police are now seeking aid from the Metropolitan force to track down perverts in Rock Creek, they virtually admit their own inadequacy. The urgent necessity of enhancing safety in the parks puts a large responsibility upon the Superintendent of National Capital Parks to sponsor this obviously desirable consolidation.

Loaves And Fishes.

Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Tammany candidate for Mayor of New York, is in a tight spot. His opponent, Mayor LaGuardia, can appeal to the electorate by simply pointing to his four years of service to the city. His good record would be a severe challenge to a much more seasoned campaigner than Mr. Mahoney. Presumably that is why the latter is indulging in promises which put old-time politicians to shame.

What could be more enticing to the type of voter with whom Tammany is accustomed to deal than offers to spend lavishly for relief purposes at the expense of the Federal Government? "Within the four years of my administration—and I know I will be Mayor of New York on January 1 next," Mr. Mahoney told a group of citizens, "I confidently expect that the United States Government will expend in the City of New York in WPA projects, to be selected by myself, upward of $500,000,000."

No doubt Administrator Hopkins wishes he were equally sure that these millions would be made available for spending by Congress. But he would most certainly resent Mr. Mahoney's assumption that the Federal authorities will relinquish their control over allocation of funds and give a local official a free hand in selecting projects. However, it is doubtful whether anybody takes Mr. Mahoney's promises very seriously; they are so obviously the product of a lively imagination.

Postmaster General Farley could easily and convincingly have insinuated what Mr. Mahoney has crudely and unconvincingly affirmed. Perhaps he will come to the rescue when he speaks on behalf of the latter's candidacy. It is not at all difficult for him to expatiate upon the benefits which have flowed toward New York City from Washington, and to hint at future favors, without making rash offers of Federal funds as yet unappropriated.

While voters are waiting to hear the melody of Mr. Farley's voice in behalf of the many candidate, however, they may ponder over Secretary Ickes' glowing tribute to the go-getting spirit which enabled Mayor LaGuardia to attract PWA funds Gothamward. Even if these conflicting tips from Cabinet members should leave voters confused as to where the Administration stands in the New York mayoralty contest, it will at least be evident that Tammany hasn't been promised full control over the Federal purse strings.

Reviving The AAA.

President Roosevelt's emphatic warning to the Senate and House Agriculture Committees that new farm legislation should not be permitted to "unbalance the expected balancing of the budget" will find many a favorable echo. Further increases in the national debt to pay farm subsidies would be inexcusable. While indorsing that part of the President's letter, however, it is well to understand the implications arising from his message as a whole.

Before mentioning the budgetary aspects of the proposed farm bill the President outlined a far-reaching agricultural policy. "The new national farm act," he instructed the committee chairmen, "should safeguard farmers' income as well as their soil fertility. It should provide for storage of reserve food supplies . . . for control of surpluses when and as necessary, but at the same time it should preserve the export markets that still are open to our farmers."

To carry out this policy, without incurring a deficit next year, it would be essential, of course, to enact new taxes. Mr. Roosevelt is well aware of that fact. And, since the Department of Agriculture is studying the revival of certain processing taxes outlawed by the Supreme Court, his letter seems to be a tacit indorsement of such levies. Certainly he offered no objection to current demands for disguised processing taxes.

In effect, therefore, the President has requested revival of the AAA. He has asked Congress to provide for "control of surpluses," which is equivalent to crop curtailment, and the inescapable implication of his letter is that he favors new taxes to carry out that policy. It was these two factors on which the first AAA was built.

It may be assumed that the prospective new taxes will be camouflaged to distinguish them from the levies invalidated by the Supreme Court. Likewise attempts to disguise the control features of the forthcoming farm bill can be safely anticipated. Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" adds a certain degree of novelty to the current policy. But in its basic purpose and methods it can scarcely be distinguished from the system which was found to be unconstitutional.

The new farm program might be less vulnerable to attack on constitutional grounds if the Administration had sufficient funds in the Treasury to induce voluntary compliance on the part of the farmers. But it is obvious from the President's warning that funds now available are inadequate for that purpose. The choice apparently lies between revival of the processing taxes and compulsory restriction of crops. Either course would involve flagrant disregard of constitutional limitations.

Is the Administration assuming that the Supreme Court has been brought under control in spite of the successful fight against packing that tribunal? If not, drastic modification of the policy outlined by the President seems to be the only reasonable alternative to the proposal of a constitutional amendment.

Australia's Election.

The general elections in Australia have apparently resulted in a decisive victory for the Lyons government.

Of the 74 seats in the lower house of the Commonwealth Parliament, Premier Lyons' own group, the United Australia Party, has secured 28. Together with the 16 places captured by the other government faction, the United Country Party, the present coalition will command a majority of eight in the House of Representatives. Returns from the Senate elections are not yet available. But in view of the overwhelming majority which the government has commanded in that house—33 to 3 for the Laborites—it could afford to lose many seats without endangering its control of the upper house.

During the campaign the principal issue was the extent to which Australia should co-operate with Great Britain, particularly in matters of defense. The government adopted a decidedly imperialistic viewpoint, Premier Lyons' slogan being "Tune in With England." The Labor Party, on the other hand, urged an isolationist position for the Commonwealth. Under the circumstances, the election will no doubt be interpreted by government leaders, and not without reason, as a mandate for larger defense appropriations to bring Australia's rearmament program into line with Britain's.

However, the outcome of Saturday's elections was influenced only in a minor degree by party programs and slogans. The determining factor was the economic situation. Since 1932 Australia has made very marked recovery from the depression. The government's financial situation, once very bad, has greatly improved. Unemployment is down. Foreign trade has increased because of the growing demand for Australia's principal export products—wool and wheat—and the rising price commanded by these commodities in world markets has been a boon to Australian farmers and sheep raisers. In some respects Australia has been enjoying prosperity even greater than that which obtained before the onset of the world depression.

This state of affairs may not last. The war in the Far East already has begun to have a depressing effect on Australia's economic outlook and the rising costs of armaments bids fair to play havoc with the Commonwealth's finances.

But the effect of these disturbing developments have not yet begun to be felt in any great measure. For the time being, Australians are conscious that times are better than they were before the Lyons government came into power. And, like the voters in other democratic lands under parallel circumstances, they do not favor swapping horses at such a time.

The Next Stage In Spain.

With the fall of Gijon last week, all of west and northwest Spain is in insurgent hands. Thus Gen. Franco is now in a position to hurl his entire army against the loyalist strongholds in the east without fear of any counter-attack on his rear. Furthermore, that part of the insurgent fleet which has been blockading the Asturian coast can now be transferred to the Mediterranean.

Franco's bid for power would seem, therefore, to have an excellent chance of success, particularly since there appears to be no immediate prospect of any large-scale withdrawal of foreign "volunteers."

However, it is much too early to conclude, as some have done, that a decisive triumph for the insurgents is in the offing. Impressive as is the long list of their military conquests, most of these gains were made during the first few months of the civil war. The more recent victories have been in areas remote from the centers of loyalist power, and even then their achievement has required considerable time and effort. Weak as the government has been on the offensive side, its defensive capacity remains strong and during these 15 months a large and well-trained army has been recruited and trained in loyalist territory.

Franco's immediate chances of success will depend on whether, during the next few weeks, he can deliver a series of smashing blows capable of destroying the government's resistance.

Three courses appear to be open to him. He can launch a new offensive against Madrid, the gates of which his troops reached last November. He can hurl his legion against the loyalist trenches in the Huesca and Sargossa areas and, breaking through, move on to Barcelona. Or he can concentrate his troops along the Teruel salient, which extends deep into loyalist territory, like a pistol pointing at Valencia. By breaking through at that point he would split loyalist territory into two sections. A still further possibility is that Franco may try to move on these three fronts at once.

With winter coming on, however, the latter strategy would seem to have little to recommend it. The probability is that the major efforts of the insurgents will be directed at breaking the deadlock in Aragon, with the Teruel salient as the spearpoint. Indeed, it is precisely this strategy which the government itself anticipates. That belief is probably one reason why the loyalist regime, which previously moved from Madrid to Valencia, is now preparing to move from Valencia to Barcelona.

In any event, the next weeks are likely to see the bitterest fighting of the civil war. Failure on Franco's part at this time need not be fatal to his chances. But it would mean continuation of the civil war into next spring, and by that time the international situation might not be as favorable to the insurgents as it is now.

For the government, however, the fighting which now impends will undoubtedly be crucial. Unless the loyalists can beat off the greatly reinforced insurgent armies, as they succeeded in doing at Madrid and Guadalajara, Franco will be master of all Spain.

Two Howard Alumni Charges.

Without attempting to pass upon details of the charges brought against President Mordecai W. Johnson by the Howard University Alumni Association's executive committee, it is possible to dispose of two points in the resolution on general principles.

The resolution is reported to urge that Dr. Johnson has been "antagonistic" to the alumni. This is an empty argument. The president of an educational institution owes no deference to the alumni. His job is to administer the affairs of the active membership and for this he is responsible only to the trustees. Whether he is cold or cordial to alumni suggestions is a matter for his sole discretion; on his decisions, not their sentiments, hangs the success of the institution.

The wisdom of thus shielding a university from dictation by alumni sentiment is made clear in the second criticism. The resolution remarks that Dr. Johnson is not a Howard graduate, implying that the university's president should be. That idea is, of course, absurd. Administrative ability in education is not indicated by the pennant a man waves at a football game, as Cornell, Chicago, nearby George Washington and a host of other universities throughout the land will testify.

Unless careful investigation shows that there is more substance to other points raised in the Howard alumni's demand for Dr. Johnson's resignation, the trustees will be justified in dismissing the resolution.

A British scientist says a fish's mind is very similar to that of a man. Heretofore we had thought a fish's mind considerably superior to that of a man, as a fish drinks nothing but water.

There's such a thing as too much flexibility. Our experience with rubber checks should teach us to beware of a rubber Constitution.

The Rat Exterminators.

Criticism Of Critics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent criticism of your editorial "America Finds Her Voice" is intolerable in that those who criticize seem to have lost every connection with the world outside.

Mr. J. A. Hall, president of the National Americanism Foundation, still is under the impression that the struggle in Spain is one between communism and fascism. Because the Communists are coming to the aid of Spanish democracy, communism is involved as the main force. The Communists have indorsed Mayor LaGuardia; does that make him a Communist? They have indorsed the President's new foreign policy; does that make Roosevelt a Communist? Mr. Hall, I fear, has let the fascist-communist bugaboo get the best of him. It is about time that he knew that the Spanish People's Front, of which the Communists are a part, was legally elected.

As Mr. Hall says, the American people don't want fascism or communism. If, however, the Fascists gain control of Spain, France will be sandwiched between two fascist countries and the English tories will choose as befits them. The United States will remain the only democracy. It can't survive, however, in a world of fascism.

MORRIS PEARLMUTTER.
Washington, Oct. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May a perplexed reader ask whether some of your recent critics consider themselves Christians. Theoretically no doubt they profess to believe in the commandment "Thou shalt not kill." Theoretically no doubt they also profess to be followers of Christ who according to the gospel of St. Matthew said, "Put up again thy sword into his place for all that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

Theoretically they no doubt profess to be opposed to change of government by force and violence. Actually, however, they are ready to associate with heathen Moors, neo-pagan Nazis and Italian Fascists whose Duce preaches blood and slaughter. Does not this readiness to cast aside all their professed principles and to indorse violence abroad in order to impose their prejudices on other people give reason to doubt their pacific intentions?

C. S. DRESHER.
Washington, Oct. 18.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: The recent attacks on your editorial "America Finds Her Voice" and the attempt to link your humanitarian attitude toward the struggle in Spain as attacking Catholicism are far-fetched flights of fancy which no calmly thinking individual can allow to pass unchallenged.

I am writing this for a group of friends who support, as must all honest individuals, your sympathy toward the genuinely elected democratic Government of Spain as against the rebel, Franco.

NORVELL NORTON.
Washington, Oct. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Seven of your readers take you to task on account of your magnificent first-page editorial, "America Finds Her Voice."

They decry "persecution," and assert men are dying in Spain for "religious freedom." But are they? May I ask that any one of your seven critics present proof that the church in Spain has arrayed itself on the side of universal religious freedom? To cry out for "religious freedom" for one's own sect and deny it to other sects, is this religious freedom?

For a number of years I have read papal literature and thus far have failed to find an authoritative statement where the hierarchy has declared for universal religious freedom—freedom for all—Jew, Mohammedan, pagan, Protestant. Such a statement may have been made; if so, please have one or all of your seven critics furnish it to you and your readers.

LOVER OF LIBERTY.
Washington, Oct. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with mixed feeling the Letters to the Editor published on October 15, assailing your editorial "America Finds Her Voice." Most of them do not merit an answer. But one of your correspondents asks for "certain facts," so he shall have them.

The Catholic Church was, until 1931, the only and official church in Spain and, as such, demanded and received from the treasury 61,000,000 pesetas per annum. This because the church considered itself a branch of the government.

Every church dignitary, from the highest to the lowest, was vested with the rights and privileges of a public official. The highest dignitaries held office as senators in the Parliament, not by virtue of election, but by divine right. (Picture, if you please, 40 or 50 Coughlin's in our Senate as life members of that body!)

The church exercised not only social, but judicial control, in many cases, over the life of the people, and for that purpose maintained many special tribunals and courts of justice. Was not Don Jose Estrani tried and convicted for mentioning the name of a bishop in one of his numerous daily columns?

To the church had been given the control of education, particularly the primary and secondary schools. Yet, under its guidance and control, two-thirds of the people could not read and write. But when Ferrer opened a school of his own, he was tried, convicted and executed!

Yes, we had in Spain three types of authorities, civil, military and ecclesiastic, and, of the three, the last held the most power. With the advent of the republic this power began to fade and, under the People's Front, it finaely disappeared. The revolution against the Spanish people is nothing more than an effort to regain this usurped power to rule.

A SPANISH CATHOLIC.
Washington, Oct. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You are permitting a rising tide of hysteria to creep into your letter column. Instead of getting incensed about the war in Spain, why no: trust to history to tell us the whole unbiased truth?

As far back as Spanish history goes the Catholic Church has stood for absolutism versus liberalism. The question which emerged in King Ferdinand's day was whether Spain would hold fast to its eighteenth century organization or accommodate itself to newer demands of constitutional government. The aim of the constitutionalists, then as it is now, was the effective transformation of Spain by education, science and industrialism. King Ferdinand in 1823, with the aid of the Holy Alliance and the nobility, was able to overthrow his opponents, the liberals, whose only crime was that they wanted a constitution.

What has the church done with its powerful influence to advance the progress of the masses in Spain, in helping to achieve any one of the objectives of the constitutionalists? When education was completely dominated by the church illiteracy was over 50 per cent, in the second decade of the twentieth century, one of the highest rates in Europe.

The Catholic newspapers in this country are bitterly hostile toward the valiant fight for democracy in Spain. Their favorite expression is the "bestial Reds." What about the annihilation of the Riff tribes in 1921, the bloody regime of Primo de Rivera, the shooting down of 5,000 Asturian miners, women and children in 1934? Was all this in the name of humanity, of civilization and the love of God?

O. SHERBY,
Washington, Oct. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is impossible for me to understand a continued unreasoning support of Gen. Francisco Franco, which amounts to a blind denial of facts that have been established beyond all possible doubt in the world's press.

Since the Moors were driven from Spain in 1492 Roman Catholicism has been the established religion of the Spanish people. Yet in the first days of his rebellion Franco met the resistance of the government by turning loose a horde of Moorish mercenaries upon his people. His own soldiers refused to fight alongside these despised Barbarians, and enough has been told already of their subsequent atrocities. How can this man be upheld as the defender of the Catholic faith, or of the Spanish people?

And how do Franco's Catholic sympathizers explain the wiping out of the civilian population of Guernica, Holy City of the Basque Catholics, by Franco's planes? This horrible story was told to the world by a surviving priest.

And just why would Nazi Germany intrude on the side of an army fighting for religion when it is the acknowledged persecutor of religion at home?

As for the charge of communism against the Spanish government, the most condemning proof seems to be the acceptance of arms from Soviet Russia. Is it believed that the loyalists should have stood unarmed against Franco's foreign ammunition while there was still an available source of arms open to them? To buy the means of defense from a friendly country can hardly be called proof of the acceptance of that country's political doctrine!

At the time of Franco's rebellion there was but one Communist in the Cortes—or Congress—the same number at present in the British Parliament. Far from following Communist policies the government has steadily refused to expropriate private property, and on the contrary support private enterprise. Neither has it seized the property of foreigners, and is at the present time making arrangements to pay debts to America incurred before the civil war.

ELIZABETH WILSON.
Washington, Oct. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to call attention to a statement published July 29 in the Toronto Star:

"Sixty per cent of the people of Spain are illiterates. I have seen thousands of them starving in the rough caves in which they live. In the same country which overthrew the monarchy, despite the revolution in 1931, there are still noblemen, grandees and industrialists living in Aladdinesque splendor. Surmounting all there is the great, powerful and incredibly wealthy church, fighting tooth and nail against every effort at emancipation, financing fascist reactionaries, supplying Fascist leaders, and wondering why churches are being burned, as a result of which, many more churches will certainly be burned."

It has been publicly made known, despite Fascist censorship, that hundreds of churches were used as arsenals, filled to the brim with all kinds of warring materials some of which have been openly blessed by priests, before being carried into battles, such as machine gun battalions, etc.

The Apostle Paul in Ephesians vi: 12, 17 said: "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God." Again the Scriptures say, "He that useth the sword shall die by the sword."

We see that the Christian's war equipment is not shot and shell but God's word of truth, which is comfort to all truth loving people.

The Post Impressionist

Romance Of The Sea.

THE three lines of 18-point type over the 3-inch story caught my dull, after-lunch eye. They read: "Seaman Has Fun, But Not On Ship, Klemmer Writes."

Wondering just who this cocksure oracle could be, I read the story. Klemmer, I learned, is a Maritime Commission employe who has written a book, "Harbor Nights," that tells all of the life of the sailor ashore and at sea. That was innocent enough. Many persons are impelled to write of the sea and her men. What got me, though, was a quote from Mr. Klemmer.

"Life at sea, I discovered during four years of it, is just plain drudgery, with no romance at all," he said.

I thought back seven years to the time when the Utacarbon was bucking her way up the northern Pacific coast to Seattle, driving through head seas and a 60-mile an hour gale. She was a tanker. When loaded, even on calm days, there was only approximately 10 feet between the ocean and the well decks. In rough weather she was more of a submarine than a surface craft.

Standing at the portholes at the top of the ladder leading from the poop deck to the port alleyway, I could look out into the sea and the storm. The decks were a mass of churning, dirty, mean water, at times washing over the flying bridges connecting our after section of the ship with the bridge and officers' quarters amidships.

Great waves towered ahead, breaking green over the fo'c'sle head. Each time we hit one of those the ship just submerged herself with it. I'd think she'd never recover, and then the stern would be thrown clear of the wave's crest and the screw would race in the air, tearing the guts out of the ship, while the engineer throttled down the engines until the screw was biting water again.

I remembered another day off the same coast, a calm day but with fog that cut off all visibility. We crept through the "soup" with the engines at half speed ahead and the whistle blasting at regular intervals with the most lonesome sound in the world.

Once during the day three destroyers passed so close that we could almost have jumped aboard them. They were like ghost ships except for the sound of their foghorns. We didn't see them until they were almost on us, but it just seemed strange and exciting, not dangerous.

When I was below in the evening the whistle frantically blew the all-hands-on-deck danger signal, while the engine went full-speed astern, shaking the ship like a terrier would a rat.

But I was still too green to react automatically and race to the deck. I stuck my head out of a porthole just in time to see a freighter with a deck load of lumber sheering through the fog wall to strike our port bow. Our cargo was high-test gasoline. I knew that if just one of our tanks was hit, Davy Jones would have a hard time fitting our pieces together so we could play with the mermaids in Fiddler's Green.

The freighter missed our No. 1 tank by scant feet. We made port with a decided list, but under our own power. It wasn't very romantic.

Then there was the time when the starboard turbine of the President Pierce broke down a day out of Yokohama. Two of the "black gang" watches had to turn to to fix the baby while the third kept the ship plugging ahead under the power of the port turbine.

We worked 15 straight hours fixing that breakdown. Fifteen hours down in the engine room, where the thermometer under the ventilator beside the log desk hadn't fallen below 115 degrees since we left Honolulu on the outward bound leg over a month previously. A few of us at a time were allowed 20 minutes to go "top side" to eat, but the rest of the time we stayed below.

There was a day to teach you about seafaring. I pulled on heavy tackles until everything went black and a shipmate helped me over under the ventilator to gulp what passed for fresh air until I was able to work again. I carried gear up and down the three flights of ladders from the storeroom to the engine room floor plates endlessly. I swung 10-pound "Mondays" and put my weight on wrenches.

It was tough, but that was one day when I didn't hear the usual sailor's grousing. Somehow, there was a picnic air about the whole thing; something that reminded me of the "old college spirit," but, all in all, I guess it was just "plain drudgery."

But romance? No, perhaps there wasn't any of that. Romance is something you read about in magazine stories or see in the movies, and fun consists of getting drunk when you go ashore.

You can't have romance without the boy-meets-girl formula and the happy ending that doesn't leave a bad taste in your mouth. There's none of it in the everyday story of man versus nature. McFee, Conrad, Masefield, Tomlinson, Villiers and the others have just written "hokum." Disgruntled Klemmer will give you the real slant on the sea.

National Guard Duties.

ON CLOSE INSPECTION the trouble in Rhode Island, in which the National Guard was called out to suppress an imaginary insurrection at the Narragansett horse track, turns out to be a frowsy row between a temperish Governor, who needs a minor league White House Tommy to write his speeches and tell him what not to do and a juicy gambling monopoly, whose manager didn't know when he was well off.

Gov. Quinn sacrificed such dignity as he might have enjoyed, and Walter O'Hara, his enemy in the case, might have gained prestige if he had had it in his character to take advantage of the Governor's rage. Instead O'Hara hollered "Copper!" as the saying goes in the underworld, with which the horse-running and gambling business is intimately connected, and that is an unpardonable error.

Track operators and gambling men who do business with politicians have a code of sorts, one article of which forbids a man to blow the whistle no matter what the apparent provocation. If they buy a politician and he proves unreliable they usually charge it to experience and let it go at that.

• • • •

BUT WHEN O'Hara fell to fighting with the Governor he began to blab about the money which he had passed around in Rhode Island politics, and that is not only bad form but worse politics, for it presents the reform element a ready-made campaign for repeal of the racing law. O'Hara's own words efficiently exploited, would be sufficient to abolish racing, and with it the profits from which he derives in dividends, salary and expense account, one of really great American incomes. His salary and expense allowance alone are $75,000 a year.

But the fight itself is local and of only passing interest outside Rhode Island and Boston.

Of real importance is the Governor's call to the young men of the National Guard to turn out in their tin hats to take his part in a cheap fight in bad weather and at serious personal inconvenience. The military demonstration may cost the taxpayers $100,000, and that is bad enough, considering the frivolous issue, but Quinn hadn't even considered that the soldiers, as citizens, might be thinking thoughts to themselves as they walked their posts in a heavy autumn rain or slept under canvas almost within sight of their homes. Young men join the National Guard for a number of attractions, but their basic motive is patriotism, and in any emergency in which the peace and safety of their State or the Nation are endangered they are always rearing to go. They have behaved well in labor troubles in the last few years, and were very helpful in the Ohio River Valley during the flood.

BUT HUEY LONG, a prize example, developed a habit of yelling for the soldiers whenever some angry rebel threatened to slap his face, and he used them several times for duty which was strictly political and illegal. If troops can be used to seize the election polls in a political fight, certain members of the force may find themselves compelled to promote the ambitions of a politician.

In such cases the men have their jobs and homes at the Governor's call, whatever the Governor's politics or whatever his motives, and they have not the option to refuse duty on the ground that the Governor is using them for purposes not included in any reasonable understanding of their oath.

Such use of the Governor's authority is sure to hurt the morale of the National Guard, cheapen its authority and eventually lead to problems of disaffection and nominal mutiny. The point is worth making just now, because the disturbed condition of politics is likely to turn up many crackpot Governors who don't know or don't care what the National Guard is for.

No soldier should be allowed to carry a musket in support of a political faction with which he is in sympathy or required to serve against a faction which he favors. No guardsman should be turned out in any factional scrap except to put down real disorder, and that with an impartial hand.

The Once Over

Rimes of a Controlled Market.

Oh, hear the tale of Casper Howe—
He said "The market's quite safe now;
All selfish men are out, you know,
As are all human instincts low."

"I can't get hurt," he said, "you see—
The Government's protecting me."
But now he is a wiser man—
It's very clear to him he can.

• • • •

Meet Arthur Thomas Wilbur Stout,
Who thought all natural laws were out,
And superseded by a ton
Of rules thought up by Washington.

"These rules," he cried with rising joy,
"Make markets safe for man and boy;
The weak investor now is strong" . . .
But now he knows that he was wrong.

• • • •

A wonder man is Cassius Gadd—
He knew that business must be bad
Because each day some fellow would
From Washington proclaim it good.

Each time they'd tell him all was well
A few more stocks he'd quickly sell;
No matter what those chiefs would say,
He'd turn and go the other way.

• • • •

Consider Chidsey Oscar Pine—
He lost his shirt in '29;
There were no rules away back then
To make life safe for all good men.

But now in '37 he
Is guarded by the S. E. C.
He's hemmed about by rules galore . . .
(But he's without his shirt once more!)

• • • •

"It's wonderful how safe I feel,"
Said Arthur Peter Poultney Beal,
"When some security I try
And know the S. E. C. stands by!

"It always seems to give to me
A feeling of security" . . .
But, ah, alas! And, ah, alack!
Just then Beal's world turned very black!

• • • •

The moral is, you will agree,
While rules are made by you and me,
In any nation, state or town,
[illegible] up must come down.

The courtroom where the "Mystery Golfer" is on trial is crowded daily. It seems everybody wants to get a look at a golfer who is in trouble and doesn't blame it on his clubs or his caddy.

They say one of the witnesses against John Montague, the "Mystery Golfer," was asked 18 questions and told reporters he had Montague two down on the first nine.

American Railroads

By a Staff Correspondent.

THE RAILROADS of the United States represent a balance sheet investment of nearly $26,000,000,000, and this amount is fairly well supported by physical valuation. The railroads have outstanding in the hands of the public approximately $11,000,000,000 par value in bonds, and these bonds have heretofore been a standard form of investment for trustee institutions of every nature.

The year 1926 was good for the American railroads. On an investment of approximately $24,000,000,000 they realized a net operating income of $1,213,000,000. In 1932 the investment had been increased by nearly $2,000,000,000 but the net operating income had shrunk to $326,000,000.

Thereafter a slow process of recovery commenced, and by 1936, though the investment as a result of retirements or abandonments had shrunk somewhat, the net operating income had increased to $867,000,000.

Carloadings On Increase During First Part Of '37.

IN THE SPRING of 1937 a substantial recovery was under way, and the net operating income for the first half of the year was $297,000,000. As compared with 1936, the first six months of 1937 showed increased carloadings of 14.1 per cent. In subsequent months, a decline in railway traffic commenced and the increases in carloadings, as compared with the preceding year, were 6.7 per cent in July, 5.5 per cent in August, 3.9 per cent in September, and 1.4 per cent for the first two weeks of October.

At the beginning of the year the railroads lost the benefit of freight surcharges, which added approximately $120,000,000 to freight revenues in 1936. Following this loss in revenue came a series of added expenses. Coal was up 17 cents per ton, oil up 11 cents per barrel, and other materials and supplies were up 16.1 per cent. Railway wages had been reduced 10 per cent in 1931, applied against the rates prevailing in 1929, but this cut had been restored in 1934 and in 1935. During 1937 there were two increases in wages; the first, 5 cents per hour, applicable to employes other than train men, and the second, 5½ cents per hour, applicable to train men. This brought an average increase of approximately 7½ per cent to all classes of railway labor.

In addition to the above, there were substantial additions in the form of pay roll taxes, for social security and for retirement.

Coal	$15,947,000
Oil	6,590,000
Other materials and supplies	85,515,000
Wages	127,000,000
Pay-roll taxes	98,981,000
Total	$344,033,000

Taking into account the loss of surcharges, the railroads face a net difference of $464,000,000 in net operating income, as compared with 1936, on the basis of traffic levels prevailing in 1936.

Operating Cost Increase Equals 10% Freight Income.

TOTAL railway operating revenues during the first six months of 1937 were $2,087,000,000, or at the approximate rate of $4,100,000,000 annually. This includes freight revenue at the approximate rate of $3,400,000,000 annually. The increased costs alone represent approximately 10 per cent annually on the freight revenue accruing during the first half of this year.

It is therefore evident that only a general freight increase, or a substantially higher volume of business, or both, can maintain a level of earning power comparable to that which was being realized by the railroads just prior to the decline in traffic and the increase in expenses. Failing increase in rates and or increase in volume of traffic, it is obvious that both employment and purchasing power must be curtailed.

In 1933 the railroads employed 971,196 people with total wage payments of $1,404,000,000. In July, 1937, they employed 1,174,434 people at an annual wage cost of $1,950,000,000. It is evident that railroad recovery was playing a substantial part in return of people to work and increased purchasing power coming from increased railway pay rolls. Assuming that decreased earnings resulting from falling traffic and increased costs might reduce railroad employment even to the extent of 5 per cent, 59,000 people would be thrown out of work and pay rolls would be reduced by nearly $100,000,000.

Railway purchases of materials and supplies represent a very substantial proportion of the business of many industries. In normal times, railroad purchases account for 17 per cent of the steel output, 23 per cent of the bituminous coal output, 18 per cent of the fuel oil output, and 20 per cent of the lumber cut.

In the depression year 1932, railway purchases of materials and supplies totaled $445,000,000 and railway expenditures for capital purposes $167,000,000; in 1936, purchases of materials and supplies $803,000,000, capital expenditures $299,000,000. The total of material and supply purchases and capital expenditures was $612,000,000 in 1932 and approximately $1,100,000,000 in 1936. A return of the railroads to depression conditions might therefore mean a shrinkage of approximately $500,000,000 in material and supply purchases and capital expenditures.

Assuming that in the industries supplying material to the railroads approximately half of the amount involved is labor, this curtailment of railway purchasing would mean a loss of $250,000,000 annually in wages paid by the supplying industries, and would probably throw approximately 250,000 people out of employment.

This, therefore, is the significance to labor of the recent decline in railway traffic and increase in railway costs.

Fishermen Suffer In Trades Sending War Aid to Japan

Charges that the American fisheries were direct sufferers as the result of Japan's warlike activities were made yesterday by William S. Snow of the American Fisheries Co-operative, Inc., of Alexandria, Va.

Snow declared 2,000,000 tons of iron and steel scrap were exported from the United States to Japan in the first eight months of this year, presumably for conversion into war materials. He said that in payment for this material the United States imported fish scrap and meal and that these imports were 4,000 tons more during the first eight months of this year than in the entire year of 1936.

In view of these circumstances, concluded Snow, "it may be truly said our American fisheries are paying the penalty for the exchange of 'scrap for scrap to promote a scrap.'"

Pastor Urges Aid For City Children

Neglect of children in the "allays and poor streets" of Washington affects the whole city's life, the Rev. William R. Moody said yesterday in a sermon at St. Mark's Episcopal Church. He appealed to church people of the District for more attention to underprivileged children.

"Neglect can kill bodies," he said, "but more than anything else it can kill souls. More people than we realize wear, all unknowingly, the mark of Cain, the murderer, on their foreheads, because, interested in their own affairs, they have neglected their less fortunate brother and his children."

Britain's Stake

By D. Graham Hutton

England's Reaping In The Orient.

The following article, by the assistant editor of the (London) Economist, is reprinted from Barron's Weekly.

IN DIPLOMACY, even less than in other walks of life, opportunities do not recur. This sorry realization is now plaguing the British government; for the wind of aggression which the great powers—and none more than Great Britain—allowed Japan to sow in Manchuria in 1931 and 1932 has, in five short years, grown to a whirlwind.

It is tearing up the mainland of Asia, destroying the trade and investments of British, Americans, French, Russians and other nationals. It is forcing the western powers, once the proud vanguard of western industrial civilization, backward from the Far East, which they were the first to develop.

To no country is the present Far Eastern crisis more materially damaging, more strategically dangerous, than to Great Britain.

FIRST, economically. Great Britain today holds about 40 per cent of all foreign investments, commercial and "portfolio," in China, excluding Manchukuo. Her total is something like $1,250,000,000. Japan comes next with about 35 per cent, that is, about $1,150,000,000. The United States owns about $200,000,000, slightly less than Soviet Russia and White Russians in China. Of the Chinese government debt to foreigners, Britain owns a third, and the remainder is divided among seven other nations.

More than 75 per cent of the British investments are located in and around Shanghai. Only 25 per cent of Japan's interests are there, the rest being in Manchukuo. Prof. C. M. Remer concluded that in 1931, 46.4 per cent of the combined British, Japanese, American and Russian investments were located in Shanghai, 36 per cent in Manchuria and only 17.6 per cent in the rest of China, including the British crown colony of Hongkong. As of 1931, the total foreign investments in China had doubled since 1914; business investments amounted to about four-fifths of the total.

Though China's external state debt is relatively small, and though it is not held preponderantly by any one power, Britain's third of it (about $250,000,000) is the most vulnerable; for the service of that debt depends on two things: (1) Internal peace in China, enabling the Nanking government to collect revenue; and (2) the maintenance of the customs service at the big ports. As Japan is in occupation of Tientsin; as Manchukuo has been lost by China; as the Japanese have now paralyzed the trade of Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton. Chefoo, Swatow, etc., the collection of customs duties is a very dubious proposition.

NOR CAN ONE expect the Nanking government, if the war is to be a war to "beat China to her knees" (in the Japanese premier's words), to recoup internal revenues for the foreign investors in place of vanished customs duties. If any foreign power is going to get assets in place of her foreign investments, it will certainly be Japan.

The Japanese war-in-all-but-name against China has another aspect which is unfavorable to Britain. If the war were confined to the north—to the Peiping-Nanking, Shanghai, Chefoo sectors— Britain could at least hope that it would be quickley settled, trade with Hankow, Shanghai and Hongkong-Canton would be resumed, and the recuperative power of that vast country would revive. But this time, compared with 1931-32, the British authorities can not count on this.

• • • •

APART FROM the economic cost to Britain of the latest Japanese war of aggression—and the losses, as above, may prove important to British finance and industry—one further implication must not be overlooked. For the first time since the Great War ended, a British colony—British soil—is threatened by military and economic developments. The naval occupation of the Palatas Reefs and one or two other islands southward from Hongkong on the British Hongkong-Singapore vital trade route has caused the gravest misgivings in London.

This, then, is the situation which the British government—the same government that in 1931 and 1932 allowed Japan to "get away with it" in Manchukuo—now has to face in the empire's eastern extremities, at a juncture when the empire's vital artery, the Mediterranean, is also being garroted by acts of piracy equal in all respects to the Japanese disregard of international law.

In such a disastrous choice of evils, the British government has scarcely an alternative but to retreat before Japanese inroads into the Asiatic land mass—even as far south as French Indo-China—in an attempt to "keep their powder dry" nearer home. The powder may certainly be wanted, all of it, within the next year or two, in Europe.

Osgood Perkins

By William Lyon Phelps

A Great Actor.

The recent death of the American actor, Osgood Perkins, is a serious loss to the stage, and a great personal loss to countless individual friends. The American theater director, Jed Harris, who combines shrewd judgment with sincere idealism, wrote a beautiful tribute in the Sunday New York Times of September 26. No one knew him better than Mr. Harris, who the moment he saw him in "Beggar on Horseback," was so impressed that when he himself began his distinguished career as producer, Osgood Perkins was the first actor he engaged.

• • • •

He was absolutely at home on the stage like a true professional, that being one of the most striking differences between the professional and the amateur, but he had an especial quality of his own, a personality so unmistakably intellectual that it would have injured his success in impersonation if his histrionic art had not been so consummate. It is tragic to know we shall not see him again, but in my mind's eye I see him clearly.

The play by Rachel Crothers, "Susan and God," in which he was acting three hours before he died, pleased him immensely. He told his wife on that last day, "I like that role. I hope the play never closes."

I saw the play last spring in Philadelphia, and have the same opinion of it as expressed by Mr. Perkins.

His full name was James Ripley Osgood Perkins and he was graduated from Harvard in 1914.

Hose, But No Firemen!

One of the features of the operations in Shanghai is that the Japanese have been getting a taste of their own medicine of destruction, which they have carried out so ruthlessly in various parts of China ever since the occupation of Mukden, the difference being that in this instance a great deal of the property that is now being destroyed is Japanese. Japanese cotton mills in the Shanghai district were especially hard hit.

To cope with the numerous fires that were started in the northern and eastern districts during the night of August 20 the Japanese naval authorities put through a call to the Shanghai fire brigade for assistance in fighting the flames. In line with the policy adopted by the foreign municipality right from the beginning of this "war," namely one of nonco-operation and not doing anything that might even in appearance associate the foreign municipal authorities of Shanghai with the Japanese operations, refused to send the brigade across the creek.

To facilitate the Japanese in their arduous task, however, the brigade sent the Japanese a truckload of hose. During the day the Japanese were so busy fighting fires that they had little time left to fight the Chinese.

Tom McCarthy

Takes A Beating.

WILEY DID the driving. "Hitler" did the work. And I took the beating.

I had told Wiley Swindell, who is a route man delivering the morning paper to rural subscribers out of Laurel, College Park and Savage, that I wanted to ride out with him some night. I thought there might be a story in the men whose day begins at midnight. And who earn their pay by "highballing" down country roads in all sorts of weather.

TOM McCARTHY.

At the time, he warned me that I might not enjoy the ride. He said that it was likely to be a little rough. Now, I'm convinced that he was guilty of gross understatement.

In the first place, I had to sit back with the papers. And Wiley drives a regulation passenger car which doesn't provide for keeping the "freight" from sliding. In the second place, Wiley wanted to get all his papers to his customers before they got up. When you figure that he had a hundred miles to cover, stops at innumerable farmhouses and some customers whose hour of rising is an hour or two before dawn, you can get some idea of how fast he had to go.

But it's not entirely that he has 100 miles of route to cover. It's the roads he travels. And the way he travels them!

The trip started out all right. I rode up in front, while "Hitler" sprawled on the papers in the back seat. But I guess Wiley just wanted to break me in easy.

Enough papers were unloaded in Silver Spring to allow me a seat—of sorts—in the back. "Hitler" came up front then, because, from Silver Spring on, he was going to have work to do.

• • • •

THE SANDWICH and coffee taken just before 2 in Silver Spring was sort of like the rations passed out just before the zero hour. There was the feeling of "wonder when, or if, we'll eat again?" Wiley even had a time getting "Hitler" back to the car.

"Hitler," I learned, is known up and down that section of the country. His claim to fame doesn't rest entirely on the fact that he is Wiley's "partner." No, his claims to fame are several.

Born in Germany 17 years ago, he still carries with him an accent which causes people to wait up an extra half-hour in the all-night lunchrooms from here to Scaggsville . . . They just want to hear him tell about the "swell had-line." Which, in translation, means "swell headline."

"Hitler's" shaven head is another mark of distinction, but his lasting glory will probably rest on the fact that he's the only "partner" Wiley ever had who could stay awake. He isn't exactly wide awake, but, definitely, he is not asleep. He seems to hover between the borderlines of each extreme. Which state, I have concluded, has its desirable attributes. "Hitler" stood the journey much better than I.

• • • •

"NOW WE'RE getting under way," Wiley told me.

At that time, we were some place out of Berwyn or Branchville. I wasn't quite sure, and I didn't quite care. I have ridden in freights and long-haul trucks, but the only thing comparable to Wiley's car was a roller coaster with brakes and eccentric impulses.

"Highballing" down unlit lanes through the woods, Wiley would suddenly slam on the brake, turn and bounce the car up what he claimed was a road and what I insisted was a trail.

It wouldn't have been so bad if it had all been straight away. But Wiley had to stop at farmhouse after farmhouse. Just about the time we started to pick up speed, the brakes would catch hold, the back end would slither across the loose gravel toward the ditch, a paper would pop from Wiley's hand into the roadside box, and then we would be under way again.

It was something to watch though, as "Hitler" rolled the papers and either he or Wiley popped them into the boxes in the split-second pause. A couple of times, I thought "Hitler" would lose his arm as he drove it out through the open window to find the box with unerring accuracy. However, the only untoward incident was when they couldn't get the paper into the roadside tube because the man on the bakery route had left a loaf of bread there.

All the time, Wiley's voice bounced along as merrily as his car. I just bounced along uneasily.

HE TOLD me that, while he drives his 100-mile route seven mornings a week from shortly after midnight until after dawn, he never quite tires of it. He knows all of his customers, though he only sees them once a month. And, in two years, he's only failed them one morning. That morning, a blizzard blocked the roads.

He never gets sleepy and he has his day so divided that he sleeps in sections. On returning to Washington about 7 in the morning, he goes to bed for three hours. Then he gets up, puts in a normal day and goes to bed again about 8 o'clock at night. At midnight, he's ready to start work.

However, he didn't mention anything about the ride. And that was becoming the most important thing in my mind. I had never covered a hundred miles before in such short spurts, constantly turning and alternating high speed with braking to a dead stop. Wiley didn't mind it. I was beginning to mind it very much.

I had fully made up my mind that whatever the lot of a newspaper routeman, the lot of his passenger is infinitely worse.

"How are you doin'?" Wiley asked me as I fought my way out of a half a dozen bundles of newspapers suddenly precipitated on me by a sharp turn in the road.

"Good," I gasped, "good." I was putting up a game but losing fight.

"That's funny," said Wiley. "People who aren't used to this ride sometimes complain of feeling sort of faint after a while. The speed and the curves, plus the braking and the rough roads, seem to get them."

"Can you imagine that?" I said faintly as I grabbed the back of the front seat to save myself from a quick trip through the windshield.

"Yeah," said Wiley as he started up again, "It's a funny thing, isn't it?"

Steel Lethargy Casts Shadow On Wall Street

Decline in Production Continues; Industry Is Key to Market.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 24.—"What price steel?" was the dominant question before the stock market today and the outlook was anything but encouraging as production at leading steel centers continued on the decline.

U. S. Steel common stock—leader on the market in all movements—has been under terrific pressure in recent weeks and continues to be the pivotal issue around which the market centers. It dropped to a new low for the year on Saturday, more than $70 a share under its 1937 high and there was no vigorous support.

Directors of the company meet on Tuesday. Weeks ago it was expected that a dividend would be paid on the common stock and there were then rosy predictions of payments up to $5 a share. But the company's operations have skidded with the remainder of the industry and now tremendous interest centers in what will happen.

Meanwhile immediate attention is centered on the weekly operating schedule to be reported by the American Iron and Steel Institute tomorrow. This has been showing a steady decline in lows since 1936. Any further sharp reduction in operating rate likely will set off additional stock market selling.

The magazine Steel today reported that operations last week dropped 10 points to 53 per cent of capacity compared with the schedule announced by the institute last Monday at 55.8 per cent. But the magazine did have a word of cheer:

"While steel consumers are buying only from hand to mouth and are using backlogs of material bought earlier in the year, producers firmly believe the present setback is temporary and not the beginning of a major recession."

Business Jitters Laid to Budget

By the Associated Press.

The National Economy League said yesterday that "overoptimistic figures, requiring repeated revisions" of the national budget by President Roosevelt were responsible for a lack of business confidence.

John C. Gebhart, director of the league, demanded that "the country be frankly informed what is required by way of economies, or new taxes, or both, to balance the budget."

"The country can 'take it' when correctly informed of the position," Gebhart said. "What it could not take would be still further disillusionment."

Boy, 5, Bags Bearskin To Wrap Himself In

Nelson, B. C., Oct. 24 (AP).—Little Barry Simpson, 5, upset the best nursery rhyme procedure by bagging his own "bearskin to wrap the baby in."

Maybe Barry tired of waiting for "papa to go a hunting," as per Mother Goose. Anyway, when he saw a bear in a tree near his home in the Kootenai district, mama held up the rifle barrel and Barry got the makings for his winter equipment.

Mrs. Burke Crams Bag For 20,000-Mile Air Trip

U. S. Peace Delegation of Five Women to See Roosevelt and Hull Before Setting Out on Tour of South America.

Mrs. Thomas Burke is busy these days figuring out how one small suitcase will hold enough of her belongings to last for a six-week, 20,000-mile trip by air. With a flying caravan of women, she will leave next Saturday on a cruise of South American republics to stimulate the movement for ratification of the treaties approved by the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace at Buenos Aires last December.

By this time, Mrs. Burke has decided that her suitcase will have to hold "just working clothes." A Chilean by birth, she will make several addresses in Spanish on the trip and, with other members of the party will be received by the heads of every South American government.

To See Hull, Roosevelt.

The Senoritas Rebeca, Marta and Graciela Trucco, daughters of the Chilean Ambassador, are planning a farewell luncheon for Mrs. Burke Friday at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue. That evening she will attend a reception to be given for the "flying caravan" by the National Home Library Associatoin, an institution for promotion of cultural relations.

Leader of the five delegates will be Mrs. Burton W. Musser, of Salt Lake City, who was a member of the official delegation which the United States sent to the Buenos Aires conference last winter. Others are Mrs. E. W. Frost, of Little Rock, Ark.; Mrs. Rebecca H. Reyher, of New York City and Robinhood, Me., and Mrs. Gaeta Wold Boyer, of Washington, organization chairman of the Peoples Mandate.

Secretary Hull will receive Mrs. Burke and the other delegates at the State Department Friday morning as, although the trip is unofficial, the Administration is interested in its success. Saturday morning the group will fly to Hyde Park, where President Roosevelt will receive members. The trip to Hyde Park will be made in a plane piloted by Jacqueline Cochran, aviatrix, who holds the women's speed record for airplanes.

To Visit 16 Countries.

Mrs. Boyer has already left and will travel a week ahead of the other delegates as far as Mexico City, the last stop, when the others will join her for the last lap of the trip back home.

It is possible that Mrs. Burke will weaken at the last moment and cram an evening gown into her suitcase, for numerous functions will be given for the delegation on its tour. Rotary clubs will give a luncheon in Valparaiso and hold a public meeting in the Atheneum in Caracas, Venezuela. In Brazil the delegates will be received by the Governors of Para and Pernambuco, and the president of the University of Chile will hold a reception when the flying caravan reaches Santiago.

The itinerary will take the caravan to Haiti, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Trinidad, Brazil, Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala, the Canal Zone and Mexico. It will return to United States soil at Brownsville, Tex., on December 9.

Quite a long trip for only one suitcase!

New Systems Won't Function Without 'Unselfish Love and Spirit of Brotherhood,' She Declares Before Church Mass Meeting.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Today's conditions present a challenge to youth to build their lives so as to save civilization, declared Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton yesterday afternoon, addressing a mass meeting of 250 persons, sponsored by the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches preliminary to the Missionary Institute which convenes tomorrow morning. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, presided at the meeting which was held in the First Congregational Church where the institute session will be conducted.

"Much attention has been given to the educational and social process of developing personality but there must also be the religious process of redeeming love which brings out the brotherhood of man," said Mrs. Overton. "We may develop new systems on an idealistic pattern, but unless we develop, at the same time, new persons motivated by unselfish love and the spirit of brotherhood, these systems will not be secure. This is the situation in Russia. We must build on the foundations laid down by Christ's teachings in order to have a structure which will stand.

"The 'nearness' with which we are confronted today, presents new problems," said Mrs. Overton. "The question is, whether this generation of youth gives promise of insight which will enable it to cope with them. Governments have not yet learned to grapple with the new nearness of the nations. Their emotional and political attitudes are based on the old competitive isolation of countries. In our new economic nearness, poverty rubs elbows with abundance and neither can be ignored; they must reckon with each other.

"There is also a psychological nearness. We are more observant of each other than before, in political strategy, advertising, in business dealings and even in friendships. We discern motives more clearly than in the past. This is a situation which calls for greater integrity and more forthright dealings in all relationships of life. It is a challenge to the president generation."

The invocation yesterday was given by the Rev. H. E. Cromer and the benediction by the Rev. William L. Darby. Mrs. Frank E. Edgington will preside at tomorrow's session of the Institute and Mrs. Overton will speak again in the morning on the subject, "Is Building a Christian World an Idle Dream"?

She arrived here yesterday, shortly before the hour of the meeting, from her home in Ann Arbor, Mich., and is staying at Strong Residence of the Y. W. C. A. She is widely known as an author and lecturer, is an American representative on the World's Youth Commission for the Universal Council of Churches and a speaker in the National Preaching Mission. She has traveled in both Russia and Germany studying the youth movements in the two countries and is closely in touch with the youth of America.

Mme. Curie's Kept House for Family

Philadelphia.—Mme. Curie carried on the experiments leading to the discovery of radium while cooking, keeping house for her husband and caring for their infant daughter. To be sure of having meals on time, the scientist would prepare vegetables early in the morning before hurrying off to the laboratory. Busy with the mysteries of physics and chemistry, she still managed to find time to dig up receipes for dishes that could be left safely to cook all day while she was at work.

The story of how Mme. Curie made a success both as a scientist and as a mother and wife is told by Eve Curie, youngest daughter of the famous couple in the Saturday Evening Post, out today.

Mlle. Curie reveals that her mother, like many conscientious housekeepers today kept a budget, and each day she recorded the weight of Eve's elder sister, Irene, and the appearance of her first teeth. Eve quotes from many of theese jottings, particularly those for the year following the fall of 1898. Mme. Curie describes Irene's progress in learning to walk, her 15 teeth.

While these homely records of a mother were being written, the parents had prepared another document which was to mark a milestone in the history of science. Published in December, 1898, it announced the Curies' theory of the probable existence of a new radioactive element, "which we propose to give the name of radium."

New Coat Styles.

Paris (U.P.).—Daytime coats with straight skirts nearly ankle-length and several inches longer than the dresses with which they are worn are a novelty interpretation of the uneven hemline in Molyneux's winter collection. Simple in line, the coats are opened at the front to reveal the shorter skirt of the dress.

Trend to Sports Alters Men's Style

Historians who look to warfare, diplomatic affairs and love affairs in high places to gauge the movements of nations may now observe men's clothing styles and add another means of determining trends of civilization.

According to Robert Surrey, nationally known stylist, the provision of more leisure time by industry has markedly influenced styles for the fall season. Mr. Surrey states:

"Indulging in sports as they do and becoming accustomed to loose, comfortable clothes, men are now demanding the same easy-fitting styles for business wear. This is reflected in the increasing use of softer clothes tailored for lounge or occasional use.

Mr. Surrey declared that the day of the boiler-front, heavy canvas constructed suit has passed on, adding that with the trend for more comfort, the waistline has dropped to the natural waist, and the position of buttons and pockets is correspondingly lower.

Slit Skirts Return.

Paris (U.P.).—Evening gowns at Molyneux have draped, slit skirts, full-hooped skirts in deep-hued velvets, or calf-length flared skirts. Handsome restaurant costumes, worn with immense turned-up hats are shown ankle-length, some with slit skirts, and often deep-cut backs, are revealed under fitted, long-sleeved jackets.

Hats for Evening.

New York (AP).—Hats are being worn again with dinner and evening clothes as they were at the turn designed with rolling brims that dip of the century. The smartest are to shadow part of the face. A number of evening frocks are worn with circular veils that fall to the shoulders.

J. T. Glotfeltys, Jr., Visit Lake George

Miss Rausch Becomes Bride at Reformation Church.

Now on a wedding trip to Lake George, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Glotfelty, jr., were married October 16 in the Church of the Reformation by the Rev. Oscar L. Blackwelder. Mrs. Glotfelty was the former Miss Dorothy Rausch, daughter of Edward Rausch, of this city. Mr. Glotfelty is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Glotfelty, of Oakland, Md.

Mrs. Marguerite Trainor was matron of honor for her sister and Miss Evelyn Rausch, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Mrs. Loma Conklyn, Miss Hortez Winfree, Miss Eunice Ann Clark and Miss Margaret Hogan.

The bride wore a white satin gown trimmed in lace and made redingote style. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Charles R. Trainor was best man, and ushers were Kenneth Trunnell, William Hoffman, Herbert Farmer, John Ermans and Daniel Conklyn.

A card party and dance will be given for the benefit of Transfiguration bazaar fund at the home of Mrs. Robert Funkhouser, Colorado avenue, Friday evening, November 5. The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of Frank J. Lightfoot, Weldon W. Price, Fran': N. Holmes, Theodore Mullican, Luther Iager, William C. Bowman, J. Evans, P. H. Coates, A. A. Bracey, Mrs. Frank Clayton, Mrs. Percy Adams and Mrs. Funkhouser.

Silver and Geranium.

Mantilla Disguise.

Paris (U.P.).—If you are tired of your lips or the tilt of your eyebrows, you may find temporary relief from them in mantillas designed by Mainbocher. Fashioned of tulle with sequin eyebrows, cupid bow tips and beauty spots that fall at becoming angles, the mantillas are in colors to match evening gowns.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE 1937 GLAMOR UNIFORM, black draped dress a la Duchess of Windsor and black hat with a veil, was nowhere in evidence, for once this season, at the final match of the Inter-American Horse Show yesterday. There was not a single veil in sight. Instead, glamor had given place to good old tweeds, and all the women were braced for the penetrating weather in heavy suits or coats and felt sports hats of the more rugged variety.

DUDLEY HARMON.

One of the best looking outfits was that worn by Mrs. Francis Garvin, the former Hope Jackson, who was accompanied by her husband. She had on a brown checked tweed coat and a peaked hat sporting a long quill. The ladies of the Belgian Embassy, who arrived late in the afternoon in a big yellow Rolls Royce, all were in brown tweed or beaver, or both. Countess Van der Straten-Ponthoz was wearing a suit trimmed at the neck with this fur, and a hat built along the lines of that worn by Anthony Adverse in the movie. Her guest, Senora de Ganara, of Buenos Aires, wore a beaver coat over her suit, and Mme. Walravens, wife of the Secretary of the Embassy, also was in brown.

Others glimpsed at the final event between the Belgian and American teams were lovely Frau Herbert Scholz, who sat in a box with the German Ambassador and Dr. Scholz, and the Herbert Blankenhorns. In a box nearby was the Cuban Ambassador, with a party which included Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, a vision in black and white. Mrs. Eugene Carusi and her sister, Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy, looked casual in gray sports frocks and sable scarfs.

LATER TO the opening of an exhibit of water colors at the Corcoran Gallery by a talented artist—Jane (Mrs. Louis) Stanley, mother of Mrs. Dean Acheson. Mrs. Stanley is a peripatetic person whose home is in Michigan, but who travels around getting material for her work. At the present time she is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Acheson in their home in Georgetown.

The water colors shown yesterday included scenes from Mexico, the Gaspe Peninsula and nearby Williamsburg. Mrs. John Farr Simmons, who knows about pictures and also has been to Mexico, was one of the many guests who were much impressed with Mrs. Stanley's delicate work done in that country. Mrs. Acheson, who as everyone knows is an artist of ability, used to study with her mother.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Acheson were there with Mrs. Stanley yesterday and others who came and admired were Keith Officer, Australian Counselor of the British Embassy; Mrs. Philip Coffin, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, whose husband founded the Phillips Art Gallery; Harry Covington and George Rublee, Mr. Acheson's law partners; Mrs. Nathan Wyeth and Arthur Krock.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone also were present. Mrs. Stone, who spent some time in Mexico last summer, is holding an exhibition of her paintings at the Corcoran Gallery from November 13 to December 3.

ODDS AND ENDS: There is a movement afoot among officials in the Capital to get George M. Cohan's show, "I'd Rather Be Right," to play on Sunday evening at the National after closing in Baltimore and before going on to New York . . . Reports say that Eve Symington outdid herself at the opening of the Waldorf-Astoria's Sert Room on Thursday evening. She looked very well in a periwinkle blue evening dress and long-sleeved jacket embroidered in beads. Jock Whitney, Elsa Maxwell, Walter Chrysler, Margaret Case and the Byron Foys were among those who heard her. Mrs. Ormand Lawston-Johnston, former Washingtonian and friend of the Duke of Windsor, was also in the party. She arrived in New York a few days ago from her home in London.

Miss Stickley, D. C. Man Wed

News has been received here of the wedding on Friday evening in Woodstock, Va., of Miss Virginia Stanton Stickley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Landon C. Stickley, of that place, to John Anthony Kelley, of Washington. The Rev. F. H. Strieby performed the ceremony, which took place in the Methodist Church.

The bride wore a princess gown of heavy ivory duchess satin and carried a bouquet of white rose buds and lilies of the valley. Miss Mary Hastings Hollaway, of Clermont, Fla., acted as maid of honor and wore a taffeta gown of peacock green and carried a bouquet of golden chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids, Miss Virginia Newman, of Edinburg; Miss Nancy Bliss, of Vestaburg, Pa.; Mrs. Leslie J. Fouts, of Woodstock, and Miss Helen Rush, of Woodstock, were dressed in princess gowns of Oriental gold. Morgan Walton 3d was ring bearer, and Suzanne Dickenson was flower girl.

Hilda Powers Becomes Bride

Is Married to Richard H. Yeatman in Lyon Park Lutheran Church.

Miss Hilda Catherine Powers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Powers, of Arlington County, was married at a candlelight service yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock to Richard H. Yeatman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Yeatman, of Arlington. The ceremony took place at Faith Lutheran Church in Lyon Park, the Rev. George Grewenon, the rector, officiating.

Miss Edith Crist gave an organ recital while the guests were assembling, and also played the wedding marches.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a royal blue suit, a small hat to match and a corsage of orchids. Miss Viola Powers, who served as her sister's maid of honor, chose a gray frock trimmed in rust colored velvet with a matching turban. The only other attendant of the bride was another sister, Miss Virginia Powers, who was gowned like the maid of honor.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Powers wore a blue gown and a gardenia corsage, and Mrs. Yeatman, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in a plum colored frock with gardenias.

After a wedding trip in the South, Mr. and Mrs. Yeatman will reside at 632 North Tazewell street, in Arlington. Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mrs. H. H. Hall, Miss Margaret Hall and Dr. Henry Hall, all of Annapolis.

F STREET AT FOURTEENTH

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Man, Married Six Months, Asks How to Avoid Constant Quarrels With Bride He Loves.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I'm a young man 29 years old and have been married six months. My wife loves me and I feel that I love her with all there is to love. However, she seems to remember only the past and certain mistakes I made in the insanity of inexperienced youth. And when things go a little hard now, she brings up the question of whether she can trust me to stay with her, or whether I will hurt her as I did several years ago.

* * * *

You see, we were engaged to be married several years ago, but, for what seemed to me good and sufficient reasons, I broke off the engagement after two and a half years. I was living with her family at the time of the original separation. Loving her as I did, living in such close proximity to her and yet having to put a continual curb on my desire for her got my nerves in such a state that most of my treatment of her was neither fair nor kind. However, she, too, is emotional and is wont to flare up over nameless worries—just for the sake of worrying, it seems to me.

* * * *

After the engagement was broken, I didn't see her for two years, until Inauguration Day last spring. Our acquaintanceship was immediately resumed and an intimate relationship grew up which led to our marriage six months ago. As I have said, we have a deep mutual respect and love for each other. We want our marriage to last as long as possible. But we are continually quarreling, to our great unhappiness and uneasiness.

* * * *

How can I convince my wife that I regret the past? that I realize my mistakes and why I made them? and that this knowledge will prevent me from making the same mistakes in future? How can she be helped to stop her everlasting worry over little things—such as fearing to go down town in the car lest the fender be bumped; or lest we bump into another car; or lest we run out of gas with no money in our pockets? I might explain, in this connection, that although I am a careful driver, we have had several fender scrapes in Washington—but that's to be expected, with traffic conditions what they are.

* * * *

We are both interested in social problems, in progressive movements, and we love good music, good books, beautiful Nature and are sincerely happy together when everything goes smoothly. But if one or the other is out of sorts, we say things which hurt and a quarrel results which saps our mutual affection and nearly breaks us up. After every storm is a period of regret. The problem is—how to avoid the storm? I'm afraid I haven't given you enough background—but what can you do with this?

PERPLEXED.

The Beam and the Mote

DEAR PERPLEXED: If you are really deserving of your wife's respect and love; if she is not, perchance, a querulous and self-pitying introvert, she should be cheerfully willing to accept at face value your simple statement that you regret your mistakes, your fairly logical explanation of why they were committed, and your sincere assurance that you have every intention of avoiding such mistakes in future.

* * * *

And yet, had you not been, during the period of your engagement, a rather undisciplined and selfish young man, somewhat lacking in matter-of-fact 'dealism of conduct, you would not have made her the whipping boy for your nervous irritability. The moment you realized propinquity was engendering urges which could not be fulfilled, you would—if you were a straight-thinking person—either have made immediate marriage possible, or you would have found yourself other living quarters. The solution you chose—that of breaking the engagement—was a combination of folly, evasion, cowardice and spite. It was anything but admirable and hardly excusable—except that every human failing is excusable when the person who has failed realizes his mistake, resolves to correct it, and heroically sets about doing so.

* * * *

Now that you find yourselves together again and married; each convinced that he sincerely loves and respects the other; each desirous of making the marriage "go," I should say both of you are suffering from an accumulated handicap; that is, a hang-over from your earlier association. One aspect of this handicap is that each knows for a certainty that the other greatly needs him, to such an extent that both of you are far too prone to take the precious gift of love entirely for granted, on the supposition that you no longer have to do anything to earn it. Also, neither personality holds much of charming surprise or romantic mystery for the other. Then, there is the only-half buried memory of old conflicts, old grievances mutually entertained, old hurts mutually dealt. Believe me when I say that neither of you has yet wholly forgiven the other his past sins of omission and commission; and neither is as prayerfully and profoundly grateful as he should be for having found the other again, if indeed you are as important to each other's happiness as you seem to be.

* * * *

Both of you are making the grave mistake of supposing that your need of each other should make the marriage go. You have settled down on this assumption like respective lumps of lead, instead of being up and doing about it. The most positive reaction your wife is showing is one of fear—which contains the germ of destruction; which invites the very thing she fears. She is primarily fearful that you may one day leave her. Yet if she were to cast out fear, give thanks to Providence for this golden opportunity which is hers to improve, and concentrate wholly on the unselfish and noble objective of seeing that she never fails nor disappoints nor hurts nor irritates you, she would be binding you to her side with hoops of steel. If such was her objective, for instance, she would not be carping about, nor constantly anticipating, an occasional bent fender. She would be so busy discerning and developing through praise and full appreciation whatever virtues, talents and accomplishments are yours that she would have no time nor inclination to stress your faults or borrow trouble. She would turn a blind eye to your frailties and thus earn your glad forgiveness of hers.

* * * *

Sara Teasdale, the poet, thus describes the attitude of the generously loving wife toward her husband: "Never think she loves him wholly, never believe her love is blind. All his faults are locked securely in a closet of her mind." And so it should be. Whatever faults either partner to a marriage has should be dismissed as completely as possible from the minds of both. It is paradoxically true that faults may be diminished virtually out of existence by placing tactful emphasis upon an antipodal virtue, rather than by dwelling upon the fault itself.

* * * *

It is this attitude of mind which makes first love, or the budding season of any love, such a transcendantally exalting and inspiring experience. Each is inspired by the other's estimate of him to try to live up to that image of self he sees mirrowed in the other's eye and mind. Such a mutual attitude should be—indeed, must be—carried over into marriage if inevitable adjustments are to be made in sucha way that the mariage endures on a basis of love. It is this attitude that both of you discarded years ago, I think. Nowadays you permit yourselves to see, to dwell upon and to be enraged by, certain inescapably human shortcomings in the other. Such mutual chronic irritability is the usual aftermath of a long-drawn-out engagement between persons who haven't the precautionary wisdom and self discipline to guard against it.

* * * *

In conclusion, I wish to say this directly to you, PERPLEXED: your wife, if she has normal perceptions and average feminine intuition, will cease to fear that you may leave her at some future day only at such time as you have made up your mind, definitely and irrevocably, to stick by her through thick and thin and to make this marriage go if it takes a lifetime and all your intellectual, spiritual and physical resources to do it. Just now, I think you're only about half-way committed, and I think she guesses it. In fact, you have betrayed your half-heartedness in this very letter you've written me. The psychologists tell us, you know, that we betray our true sentiments by our slips of tongue and pen. You speak, in the second paragraph of the foregoing letter, of "the original separation." There has only been one—as yet. Further along, in the third paragraph, you say "we want our marriage to last as long as possible." A man who was determined at all costs to make his marriage endure would have ended that sentence just four words sooner.

* * * *

So, may I suggest to you, PERPLEXED, that you attend to the beam in your own eye before removing the mote from your wife's? As for how to "avoid the storm"—there's just one way. By beginning with yourself. By refusing, absolutely and positively, to be drawn into a quarrel. And that doesn't mean by being obstinately and mulishly and insultingly silent. But by giving the sunny answer, the quick and sincere apology, the tender and sympathetic word. By deliberately invoking love, instead of recklessly unleashing resentment.

Spacious, With Handy Compartments

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

YOU not only have to watch the silhouette of your costume, but also that of your handbag. The latest bags are designed to harmonize in line with that of the suit, coat or frock; whether it happens to be Directoire, tubular, or the 1900 influence. A noted woman handbag designer, not only has an eye to smartness, when creating a new style, but considers carrying comfort and spaciousness, equally important factors.

After designing a bag she tests it by carrying it about filled with various cosmetics and other gadgets that seem necessary to the feminine mind, opening and closing the pockets frequently. If the bag stands up well for several days of this test and is comfortable to carry about she includes it in her collections.

The fitted handbag shown here, of fine calfskin, is typical of all the latest qualities which go to make a bag a practical and smart accessory for the business woman. It has a squared-off silhouette, gold chatelaine handle and is equipped with numerous compartments to save time when hunting for documents, cosmetics and the like. It is spacious, the styling is adaptable to simple daytime costumes and it is easily carried either under the arm or by the metal handle. Black, brown and the popular dark colors are available in this styling in both smooth leathers, suede and antelope.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 24.

NEVER think that fall here is only a matter of new duds, football games and the arrival of Guy Lombardo's band for dawncing. Oh dear me, no! At this time of year we also make a headlong advance on what Red Russia calls "the cultural front." Why, over the past week-end our Culture clanked into high!

ALICE HUGHES.

On Thursday evening the old ladies put on their bombazines and turned out for the opening concert of the Philharmonic Orchestra's season at Carnegie Hall. Young Maestro John Barbirolli, first permanent stick-waver since the departure of the great Toscanini, whipped the sawers and tooters through Beethoven's Seventh and a goodly crowd was there, all very soulful. But on Friday our culture really got in its best licks so far. Col. de Basil presented his Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo for a short season at the Metropolitan!

Perhaps you know that quite a large segment of our population is stark ballet crazy. These maniacs all turned out for the opening—talking to themselves, sighing, sending flowers backstage, and yammering in that peculiar jargon that only balletomanes understand. A ballet-fan makes a moie-fan appear but a tongue-tied imbecile. How they do go on! The Ballet Russe was hopping its best, with most of the old pets on hand (save pretty Toumanova, who is ill on the coast), and no less than 11 Americans among the 80 twirlers and posers. Marcel Leplat of Seattle, called Platoff because all Ballet Russers evidently MUST seem Russian, has a leading role in Fokine's new arrangement of "Coq d'Or." Four of the 11 come from Ohio—Vivienne Schmidt, Betty Louise Reed, Edward Dzikovsky and Lorand Andahazy. But the new pet is Sono Osata, a lovely child who looks like Merle Oberon and hails from Omaha. Omaha mama, Jap papa, and oh, very cute!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Was my apartment house, and all of Murray Hill, in an out-size dither Saturday! My elevator man lunged at me, stuttering, "Herbert Marshall has just gone up to Dr. Sidney," he said. The doc is a noted osteopath who crunches bones on the floor below me. I didn't see the charming actor, nor even hear his bones crack, but his presence caused some excitement, for though we have everything from J. P. Morgan to little me, movie actors seldom get down our way! . . .

* * * *

Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Doo-chay, sailed on the Rex the other morning. He's a good-looking lad and affable to the press, but the more violently democratic portion of our public turned its collective back on the offspring of the Totalitarian Boss. . . .

* * * *

I learn with small amazement that the outlying boroughs of the metropolis raised 600 tons of vegetables this year, with tomatoes the leading crop! Oh, we have our sturdy farmers! But not on rocky Manhattan Island—so jammed and poisonous that there's not room for even one hill of beans! . . .

* * * *

My favorite address of the year is that of Stanley Marcus, noted young merchant of Dallas, Tex. Stanley lives at No. 1 Nonesuch road. In my own part of the country, almost any address in Babylon, Long Island, is pleasing to the imagination! . . .

* * * *

Ernest Hemingway's new novel, "To Have and Have Not," has stirred up a cyclone in literary circles here. Most of the critics seem to deplore many things about it—and the more they deplore, the more the book will sell. It's Big Stuff's first novel since the great "Farewell to Arms" eight years ago, but his addicts have remained faithful . . .

By the way, if you want to learn to write radio scripts, come right along and sign up for the new course in that art at our Columbia University. The U now teaches everything save finger-waving I think—perhaps even that.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WOMEN ARE not such good drivers as men, and their back-seat advice is not so valuable.

Boiled down, there is the gist of a recent report of the findings of the Harvard University Bureau for Street Traffic Research, as given by Prof. Harry DeSilva, of that bureau.

Prof. DeSilva does not come right out with any such brutal indictment of feminine driving. He says, very tactfully:

"The statement, recently imputed to me, that women drivers are muscle-bound was incorrect. It is well known from numerous psychological experiments and has been corroborated in our own studies that, on the average, women do slightly poorer on all the tests, with the exception of the visual tests, than do men."

Athletics a Help.

"And since the back-seat driver's advice is based on his or her own reaction in a traffic situation, it follows that "a husband's advice is more apt to be from the angle of skill, whereas a wife's is from the angle of safety."

From the findings of the bureau, physical condition seems to be the deciding factor in the burning question as to whether men or women are the more skillful drivers. A failure to participate in athletics is responsible, apparently, for the difference in physical condition. Not only do women have less opportunity for development through sports, but "girls cease to be tomboys and settle down to a more placid, 'ladylike' existence about the age their bodily co-ordination should reach its peak," Prof. DeSilva points out.

Although high school girls are as apt driving pupils as boys, it was found increasingly difficult to teach women—as compared with men—to drive as they grow older. "The reason is," says Prof. DeSilva, "that a considerable portion of the male population continues to keep in good athletic condition in the twentieth, thirtieth and fortieth years. Women, as a result of confinement to housework, lack this general co-ordination."

Early Driving Best.

If you learned to drive in your teens, the chances are that you are a good driver, for the report showed that skill acquired then is never lost. But Prof. DeSilva does not intend to discourage the older woman from learning to drive. He gives some valuable suggestions which will help her to become as good a driver as any of her menfolk, and the first one is that you take your driving from some person other than your husband or brother. "A husband," Prof. DeSilva declares, "makes the world's worst instructor for his wife."

The middle-aged woman should arrange for twice as much instruction as the girl in her teens. She should be prepared to spend a long time in learning to drive.

Learn to relax while driving. Fear of losing control of the car is responsible, apparently, for the difference in physical condition. Not turning of the right hand to the steering wheel between gear shifting, and an unnecessary, rigid, forward position of the body. "I do not recommend complete relaxation while driving," Prof. DeSilva says, "but one of the obvious factors in good driving is a restful position and a moderate grip on the steering wheel."

Exercises Given.

Your general exercise program is reflected in your driving, for your physical activity affects your health, efficiency and ability to relax.

The GENTLER SEX

By Melvina Lindsey.

Woman's Day.

"Today's lesson, ladies, will be devoted to showing how by a few simple little home remedies, any woman—every woman—in this perfectly marvelous age of feminism, can develop a successful personality.

"One of the most important of these these is bath salts. Bathe in perfumed water as often as possible daily—if you are employed, you may find it convenient to have a portable bathtub and screen at the office—and always anoint yourself in sweet-scented oils. Spare NO expense in bath perfume. Recent laboratory tests have shown 8⅓ out of every 10 men scent-conscious.

"The second step in your development of personality is your foundation garment—or, if you prefer, the two-way stretch girdle and uplift braissiere. It has been truly said that the foundation of glamour is the foundation garment. Spare No expense in buying corsets. A recent drug-store poll showed men a unit in condemning sloppy feminine figures.

As Men Like It.

"Third, keep you hair immaculate, sleek, shiny, every strand in place at all times. Yet be careful to avoid that set, fresh-from-the-beauty-shop look. A census of 5,000,000 unemployed men has shown that they prefer hair that is always freshly shampooed and yet doesn't look it.

"Fourth, as to dress. A majority of men, it has been ascertained by a reliable poll of public opinion, prefer women to be smart, sophisticated and dashing in their attire by day, yet romantic and glamorous by night. Develop a flair for chic hats, unusual handbags, clever shoes. Above all, be faultlessly groomed at all times, especially near the end of the day in the office or on the maid's afternoon off. Twenty thousand taxi drivers have recently gone on record insisting that women be groomd to the teeth.

"So much for the material things. Even more important are the intangible qualities you will need for feminine success. Here are a few 'don'ts' to help you:

"Don't be possessive. If you see your husband or man friend assisting a blonde in a leopard coat into a taxicab, be careful to avoid any tactless mention of it as you ride home with him from the movies on your street-car pass and his dime.

The Glittering Eye.

"Do not interrupt. Listen with your eyes glued on your masculine conversationalist, leaning eagerly forward at an angle of about 35 degrees south of the hip bone. A little thyroid extract may help to develop the hypnotized stare.

"Do not speak in a rasping or uncultivated voice. Develop tones that are soft, warm, silvery, lilting, animated, pleasant, serene, kindly, silken, rounded, alive, restful and vibrant. Statistics compiled from 14,768 retired pawnbrokers and egg candlers show that 97½ per cent of men are particularly sensitive to feminine voices.

"Finally:

"Do not have a hurried air no matter how great the emergency. It makes men jittery.

"Don't ever fidget. It makes men nervous.

"Don't get tired. It makes men impatient.

"And don't under any circumstances have crooked seams in your stockings. Ten thousand college alumni of the class of '87 recently in a questionnaire listed straight stocking seams as their first requirement of feminine charm.

"Thus you see, ladies, how really simple it all is. I just want to say in conclusion that this is a truly wonderful century we all live in and that with the marvelous opportunities opening for women on all sides, there is no limit to where you—or you—or YOU—may go if you will only master the art of making people—especially men—like you."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Vitamin Role Debatable.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE VITAMINS—those substances in food which are so essential for health and growth—have been popularized so that the name is a common word in the language. Yet much of our knowledge about them is theoretical rather than practical. And what is practical is almost entirely applicable to children. What role the vitamins play in adults is highly debatable. I mean under normal conditions of living, with a varied and mixed diet. Are vitamin concentrates—that is, substances that are extracted from foods or synthesized in the laboratory so that they are pure vitamins—necessary or helpful to health in adults? The answer to that question is a tissue of hypotheses.

In infants, we know that it is advisable to add two vitamins deliberately and separately to the diet—Vitamin D in the form of cod liver oil, and Vitamin C in the form of orange juice—because the infant's diet is liable to be deficient in these. But then, the infant's diet is so restricted that it would be natural that such should be the case.

What we actually know about vitamins that is practical can be summarized in a few words. A mixed diet, including vegetables, fruits, fresh foods, fats (butter), milk and eggs and grains, is necessary for perfect health for adults. Children must have all the vitamins in abundance for healthy growth. The only ones they may miss if they get a good quality of milk are D and C. That, in concentrated form, is the vitamin content of our vitamin knowledge.

Much as we hear about vitamins, we must realize that it is largely based on experiments on animals. You may read some lurid headline some morning that "Prof. Oshkosh has discovered the vitamin that causes growth. Growth can be increased at 70 times normal rate," and you think "that is just the thing for the little boy next door who is so short." But the fact is the "growth hormone" referred to in the papers has not been working on humans, but on "Ralph, the rat," now famous in song as well as scientific literature.

I am not attempting in the above paragraphs to minimize the importance of the vitamins. Research in this field is one of the most active in medicine. We will review some of it in the articles this week.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

A lady who lives across the street from Chief Justice Hughes came home late one evening and found herself without a key . . .

She rang the bell, pounded on the door, went around to the rear, yelled up toward the maid's bedroom window, returned to yell from the front, threw gravel against the second-floor glass. Still no response. Then she honked her horn.

• • • •

"Go away!" said the stately figure, sternly. "Go away, please! Go away immediately!"

• • • •

Some day when you're not too busy remind me to tell you how the food and drugs laboratory, in Secretary Wallace's backyard, tests a pea's tenderness . . . It's probably one of the most precise acts ever accomplished in a Government office . . . If you're agog about that one, then I'll explain how these ardent scientists test the canned tomato for proper color. That will wow you.

"—British lion in social mood"

Quite numerous among the journalists at the White House conferences are press agents from various Government bureaus and departments. . . . They come as scouts from their chiefs, who don't see the President as often as they'd like, and who want to know the latest White House wave length on matters affecting their bureaus.

• • • •

They could, of course, read the newspaper reports. But they want more than that; they want the latest presidential inflection as he answers, or declines to answer, a question affecting their projects . . . Sometimes a raised eyebrow, a note of bafflement or exasperation, a quip or a word from the corner of the mouth, tells 'em how they're doing more than a flood of memos through official channels.

• • • •

In more frivolous circles at the Capital it's asserted positively that the new German Embassy will be built in the shape of a swastika, to blazon the Fuehrer's might to the American skies and to passing airplane passengers.

• • • •

At each tip would be a pagan chapel—one devoted to heiling Hitler; one to the worship of Woden, who used to require human sacrifices; one to hymns of hate against non-Aryans, and one to thanksgiving for the Aryanism of the Nazis—their Hitlerian blondness, their Goebbelsian tallness, their Goeringian slenderness. Anyhow, it's a hint to the architect.

"—design for a Nazi Embassy."

Despite her reputation for a certain social frigidity, Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador, has the largest calling list of anyone in Washington. She leaves cards every season at 3,500 homes, which makes the average Congressman's wife, with 200 or 300 calls to make, seem positively "selective," as some of the snootier gentlefolk call it.

• • • •

This is partly because more people leave cards at the British Embassy than at any other Washington residence. She doesn't flug all these cards around herself, of course; just sends a chauffeur or two to make the rounds; but it's a soothing gesture to the recipients—and a big printing bill.

• • • •

Although Lady Lindsay belongs to what a charming lady described to me the other day as "the American nobility" (she was a Hoyt), she must have a streak of the democratic spirit in her somewhere . . . Her frosty reputation, incidentally, is due largely to some tart comments on her in books published the last few years on the Washington scene, perhaps by neighbors who didn't get cards.

A newcomer here is a little frightened by the seething ambitions of Washingtonians, their thirst for self-improvement. . . . Everyone is studying everything from mah jongg to diplomacy.

One girl I met at a cocktail party is studying Chinese, the Big Apple, radio announcing and personality, all at the same time. . . . I tried to interest her in a cooking course.

Chamber Plans OpenForum on Fairfax Roads

Citizens Invited to Series of Meetings Starting Wednesday Night.

The highway committee of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a series of public road meetings beginning this week with a gathering at the Burke Community Hall Wednesday night. James Keith, of Fairfax, is chairman of the committee. The series will be climaxed with a county-wide meeting in the Fairfax Courthouse, November 16. The highway group of the trade body decided to hold these meetings to give the local citizens an opportunity to discuss immediate and future road needs.

An attempt will be made to secure factual data from citizens in the different sections of the county which can be compiled into a general road summary. The conclusions of the group will be submitted to the county board of supervisors.

The State now has full control over all roads in Fairfax County but under the law citizens must present their petitions for road improvements or extensions to the county board of supervisors, who in turn can indorse the recommendations and turn them over to the State highway department.

Officials of the county trade body have stated that in undertaking the survey no criticism is aimed at any State or county officials in the matter of roads, but the project is being carried out in the nature of a co-operative move since no local governing group is in a position to carry out a similar study.

Montgomery Firemen to Ask Code Revision to Bar Hazards

Committee to Draft Amendments Named at Annual Session at Takoma; Kensington C. of C. to Weigh Bond Program.

General tightening of county building regulations to eliminate fire hazards will be a principal objective of the Montgomery County Association of Volunteer Firemen in the next year, it was announced at the association's annual convention at Takoma firehouse.

The convention unanimously elected Spencer J. H. Brown, of Sandy Spring, as president, and William Wootton, Rockville, as treasurer. The secretary will be appointed by the president.

Proposed amendments to the building code will be drafted by a committee composed of Irving W. Johnson, Takoma Park, chairman; Joseph Martin, Takoma Park; Mark Reid, Chevy Chase, and Ralph H. Burdette, Kensington.

Johnson reported that complaints have been made about new houses containing fire hazards that appear to be within the law and the committee will seek to have the code amended to make such hazards illegal. He said a conference will be sought shortly with officials of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which recently recommended a revised code to the board of county commissioners.

Retiring President J. Thomas Kennedy, of Silver Spring, was presented with a past president's pin by Victor H. Bender, also of Silver Spring.

Prior to the business meeting the association held its annual banquet, with a talk by Robert B. Criswell, Maryland University engineering fire service extension instructor.

The annual Damacus Community Fair has been set for November 12 at Damascus High School, it was announced yesterday. The fair will be sponsored jointly by the Home Arts Club and the Future Farmers Club of the high school.

This year's fair will include exhibits of food, clothing, farm produce and poultry, and will feature a field day program under direction of the Future Farmers Club. The fair will close with a band concert.

Brazil's Envoy To Crown King Of Apple Fete

Aranha to Aid at Annual Harvest in W. Virginia on November 10.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 24.—Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian Ambassador to the United States, will formally crown the 1937 apple "king" at the third annual Apple Harvest Festival here November 10, the first day of the two-day festival, it was announced today by festival officials.

He was secured through the efforts of Congressman Jennings Randolph, of this district.

The idetnity of the "king," annually chosen as the individual grower having produced the largest crop of commercially marketed apples during the preceding year, will be disclosed Wednesday, officials said. It was indicated he will be from Hampshire County, one of the four co-operating counties—Berkeley, Morgan, Jefferson and Hampshire.

The coronation will take place at the high school stadium here or, in case of inclement weather, in the high school auditorium. A concert by the high school band will start the ceremonies. The theme of the pageant following the coronation will be the old Swiss one of William Tell.

An innovation this year will be selection of a prince and princess from the three other counties.

Dr. Blackwelder Praises Missions

Speaking before a meeting at the Calvary Baptist Church in observance of the fifty-third anniversary of the founding of Central Union Mission, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, last night told an audience of 700 that the mission is "a symbol of a sense of personal responsibility in a day when too many men rely on systems of government to carry the public responsibilities."

Dr. Blackwelder said the world of today is "split vertically into nations, horizontally into races and obliquely into classes." The public, he believes, pays too much honor to men who build their fame on human suffering, while the mission and similar organizations stand for "the healing arts—the essence of Christianity and brotherhood."

Damage Rises To $500,000 as Floods Recede

Bladensburg Leader Says Loss Is Even Greater Air Service Resumed.

After causing damage estimated at more than $500,000, flood waters of the Potomac's tributaries were reported receding rapidly in nearby Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties yesterday.

Declaring the flood waters were worse than the 1933 disaster, Vincent A. Osterman, president of the Bladensburg Town Commissioners, estimated the damage was considerably more than the 1933 figure of $500,000.

Bladensburg and Colmar Manor, under two and three feet of water Saturday, were reported recovering from effects of the high waters as scores of families began moving back into deserted homes.

Roads leading to the Laurel race track and the Washington-Baltimore boulevard in the vicinity of Peace Cross also were above water yesterday. Damage to the roadways was confined to large deposits of mud and debris, officials said.

Service was resumed at the Washington Airport and complete drainage of high waters there was reported. Roads under the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge and portions of the East-West highway were still under water last night but park officials said traffic would probably be resumed there today.

Meanwhile, the Weather Bureau issued a forecast of partly cloudy today with slowly rising temperature and possible rain late tonight. Minimum temperature recorded yesterday was 38 degrees at 7:15 a. m. and a high of 50 at 3:15 p. m.

Former Police Chief of TVA Says Area Is Free of Crime

Only One Serious Offense in Two Years Is Record Cited to Chicago U. Alumni in Series on 'Yardstick' Program.

Policing properties of the Tennessee Valley Authority presents a few major problems, Kenneth A. Rouse, alumni president and former TVA police chief, told 100 alumni of the University of Chicago and their friends at a supper last night. Meeting in the American Association of University Women's Club, the Chicago alumni also saw motion pictures of TVA and held an open discussion on the subject.

"In my two years as officer in charge of the policing system of TVA," Rouse said, "only one serious offense was committed. That was the act of a person not employed by TVA but who happened to be on property under its jurisdiction."

W. C. Brown, former personnel officer of TVA and now with the Social Security Board, spoke on "Personnel Policies, Practices and Procedure." Methods of handling the employment of the more than 14,000 TVA workers were outlined by Brown in his talk.

Other speakers were, Ralph Hogan, formerly in charge of TVA educational activities and now with the Social Security Board, and Miss Marie White, formerly in charge of social and home vocational work with the Administration.

Drunk Driving Charge Lodged After Crash

Michael J. Hackett, 44, of 1724 Third street northwest was charged with driving while drunk last night after his automobile was in collision at Queens Chapel road and Bladensburg pike with a car driven by Joseph G. Hildebrandt, 40, of the Capitol Park Hotel. Neither was injured.

George Waters, colored, 70, of 2418 K street northwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital last night for treatment of a fractured right leg after being struck by a hit-run automobile at Twenty-eighth and M. streets northwest. Police said the hit-run car was believed to have been a taxicab.

Income Levy Is Second Choice of Voters in Partial Check.

Residents of the District who have used The Washington Post's ballots to indicate their preference regarding a major tax to replace the business privilege levy, favor a sales tax by a preponderance of nearly 3 to 1, it was shown yesterday by a check of returned voting blanks. An income tax was the second choice.

The four proposals on The Post's ballot are those declared by Commissioner Melvin Hazen to be foremost on the list of levies under consideration. They are an income tax, a sales tax, a modified business privilege tax or an increase in the realty rate above the basic $1.50.

Commissioner Hazen also has stated that ballots via The Post's referendum will be welcomed by the Commissioners in helping solve the tax problem. He also has stated no decision will be made until the recommendations of the tax committee are submitted to the advisory committee of citizens, headed by L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Good Cross Section.

The Post's readers who returned ballots favoring a sales tax comprise a fair cross section of Washington's residents. Among the professional persons who voted were dentists, Army and Navy officers, physicians, teachers, bankers, and lawyers. Others favoring this type of levy described themselves as insurance men, contractors, home owners, clerks, Government employes and retired businessmen.

The same wide variety of occupations was found in the voters who favored an income tax if the District must have new taxes next year. A combination program of sales and income tax ranked as third choice, while a business privilege tax was fourth and an increase in the real and personal property tax above the old rate of $1.50 was last.

Other Suggestions.

Besides the votes of the four major tax proposals, a few scattered suggestions were received by The Post. These included a proposal for a 20 per cent increase in tax on land and a 1 per cent reduction on improvements. Another was for an unmodified business privilege tax.

The advisory committee of citizens is studying levies on beer, on cigarettes and tobacco, on foreign corporations and an increase in public utility taxes. These proposals, however, were considered last year and rejected.

None of these latter proposals, it is stated, would produce enough revenue to meet the $5,000,000 deficit in the recommended $50,000,000 budget which the Commissioners sent to the Budget Bureau on Saturday.

Religion Is Basis Of Stable Society, Priest Says on Air

The Rev. John K. Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, declared in the Washington Catholic Radio Hour broadcast over WOL last night that a society, to be sound, must be made up of men who love and worship God.

Saying that labor troubles had revealed that "even our nation consists of human beings," Father Cartwright pointed out that the stability of institutions rest upon the moral qualities of the men who administer them or who are subject to them. Men must be willing to live up to the perfection of institutions and must be willing to be citizens, he asserted.

The priest declared that only morality can make a good citizen and that only the spiritual faith imparted by the church can cause that sense of morality.

Location Scout Couldn't Find The Ohio River

By Frederick C. Othman.

Lake Arrowhead, Calif., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—While a studio scout hunted across the land for a place to shoot an Ohio River picture—the Ohio itself wouldn't do!—M.-G.-M. discovered an elegant, if synthetic, Ohio River today, virtually in its own backyard.

The only trouble with this private river is that it isn't; it's a narrow finger of Lake Arrowhead high in the San Bernardino Mountains, 70 miles west of Hollywood. There is an old-fashioned river steamboat built on pilings at the dock, a speedboat whizzes around, out of the camera's range, to make the kind of ripples that the Ohio has, and the general effect is a better than exact duplicate of the real thing.

The picture, entitled "Benefits Forgot" and starring Walter Huston with Seulah Bondi, Jimmy Stewart and Guy Kibbee, is a drama of Civil War days, based upon the love of a mother for her son. There is no other love interest in it and hence it is unique, according to Bradbury Foote, who wrote it.

Wearing a funny-looking blue cap such as baseball umpires sport, and no necktie, Foote doesn't look like an author. He thinks his story is getting superb production, but he can't help laughing about that Ohio River business.

Couldn't Find Ohio River.

"They sent the scout back East to find an Ohio River and he couldn't locate one anywhere," Foote said. "He traveled 4,000 miles through Tennessee and Alabama and Arkansas and no telling where else, but he couldn't spot a single place that would do. He finally got called back with a telegram saying we had discovered an Ohio here at home, and I surely would liked to have seen his face."

We couldn't help suggesting that maybe the Ohio River would have been a pretty good place to depict the Ohio River, but Foote said it wasn't as simple as that. The trouble was that his script called for a midsummer scene at a river port, and he didn't finish the story until autumn.

"So the leaves are falling along the banks of the Ohio and turning red and brown and yellow—and we had to have green ones," he said.

For the sake of this greenery, the studio built a complete village here, in the style of the 1850s and sent up 200 people in the costumes of the time to populate it.

The camera is above the levee, looking down at the River Queen, a side-wheeler, tied to the shore. Miss Bondi is saying goodbye to her son (Stewart) who is going to the wars, never to return.

Director Clarence Brown sends a sheepherder with his flock toward the boat. He has some chickens clucking on her upper deck. Just as Miss Bondi kisses Stewart a tearful farewell, Brown waves his handkerchief.

Whistle Has Cold.

That's a signal for the skipper to toot his whistle. The whistle, which works with compressed air, but shoots out a cloud of imitation steam, seems to have a cold. It squeaks. Brown does the scene again and this time the River Queen produces a toot which reverberates among the folks playing bridke on the terrace of the resort hotel, around the bend.

The scene still isn't any good. One of those pesky speedboats, which must make the river's waves, moves into the camera's range. Brown's assistant yells through a loud speaker for the wave-maker to keep his 1937 apparatus out of sight. Shooting continues.

Huston, playing the part of the parson-father who doesn't understand his son, is dressed in his dominie clothes, including long-tailed blue coat and boiled shirt; but he hasn't anything to do, except wait.

He laments the fate of his recent stage show, which fizzled in San Francisco, and announced that it's being rewritten for another try next year. He tells about his mountain lodge across the range and discusses the manufacture of furniture. He has a woodworking shop in his cellar, but his wife doesn't much approve of its results.

The Ohio River will remain here for five weeks more. Then M.-G.-M. will dismantle the River Queen and the Ohio will turn back into a piece of a lake.

Gayety

Some of the radical changes that variety show operators and owners promised the public this season, particularly in better talent, is evident in the current revue playing the Gayety.

Foremost among the newcomers is one Bobby Morris, without doubt the most clever and funniest comedian to appear at the Gayety Theater in the last decade. This is a broad statement, but after seeing this fellow Morris, there it is, without qualification or hesitancy.

Bobby Morris is a comedian in every sense of the word. His lines are original, clever and, above all, clean. Three of his numbers are unusually funny, namely, "The Fire-fighter," "Young Communist" and "The Fighter," the last one of the funniest "bits" ever seen anywhere. Incidentally, assisting Bobby in this number is Maxie Kadin, a promising young Canadian boxer, who, we are informed, is conditioning himself for several matches with the cream of America's pugilists.

The distaff portion of the bill is upheld by such talented damsels as Lea Howard, Irene Cornell, Claudia Ferris and Pearl Mylie, the last named, a dark-eyed brunette whose musical specialties are offered in a manner as pleasing to the eyes as to the ears.

Bobby Vail, who is quite a comedian in his own right; George Kaye, a clever and competent young man in his combined juvenile and singing character, and the worthy tap-dance routines presented by Joan Lynn and Earnie Dearing complete a bill which ranks with any seen at Colonel Lake's music hall. Last, but by no means least, a well-trained line of young and pretty girls make up the chorus.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Latest Demonstrations of "Perfected" Television Prove It One of the Films' More Distant Threats

Vast Research Remains to Be Done to Make New Development Commercially Practicable; New Deal Travestied on Baltimore Stage; Play Tournament Comes to End With Banquet; Notes of the Theater.

THAT nebulous and vague specter of a new amusement medium known by the name of television—held by many to be a potential rival of the cinema as a source of mass entertainment in its ultimate form—need not be looked upon at the moment, it seems, as a serious threat to the supremacy of the motion picture.

BELL.

Although technical progress has been made to the point where television now is able to project an image 3x4 feet in size, as opposed to the maximum 7½x10 inches, as shown to interested investigators on November 6, 1936, so much remains to be done to achieve commercial practicability that the celluloids may reasonably conserve their fretting until some indefinite futuire date.

Last week 300 film technicians, inventors and laboratory experts returned to their test tubes and work benches from the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in New York, after four days of abstruse discussion of new developments in practice and procedure in the mechanical phases of television production, distribution and exhibition, secure in the belief that the new scientific marvel is a distant possibility in the field of public amusement. This conclusion was reached after a half-hour's demonstration of the latest refinements that have been accomplished in television during the past year, presented by David Sarnoff, chairman of the Radio Corporation of America.

This was the first public demonstration of the new RCA cathode-ray projection tube, creating a large picture, and took place as the N. B. C. television transmitter on the Empire State Building sent a program, received from the National Broadcasting studios, back to the RCA building and the S. M. P. E. audience. The concensus of opinion was that it was good—but not good enough.

Similar reassurance comes to the motion-picture industry from Adolph Zukor, head of Paramount, who has just returned from a survey of the Euopean field and, while abroad, availed himself of the opportunity to observe the latest developments in television on the other side. It is his view that television, even when finally perfected, will offer no more dangerous competition to the screen than radio does at the present time.

In some minds, that will be enough. It does not, however, forecast the complete extinction of gelatin entertainment as so many have dolefully prophesied. That should be an item of some comfort to the legendary "man in the street," with the usual 25 or 50 cents in his pocket and a couple of hours to slaughter painlessly by gazing at a screenful of lively shadows that emit agreeable words, songs and commotions—as they sometimes do.

• • • •

The sagacious Mr. Zukor, who solaced this column's inability to attend the banquet in his honor at the Carlton last January with a gift of 1923 Mumm's Extra Dry dispatched to its desk by special emissary, has other heartening things to say. Among them are the surmise that foreign distribution of his company's product will increase 40 per cent over last year during 1937-1938, and the announcement that he signed no new European talent on this trip. Already having under contract Isa Miranda, the so-called queen of the Italian screen; Franciska Gaal and Georges Rigaud, the pioneer producer expressed a willingness to let it go at that and concentrate on whatever talents these distinguished visitors to Hollywood may find it convenient to reveal.

This is the week during which the National Capital finds itself in the unusual position of sharing interest in the theater with the neighboring city of Baltimore.

Tonight, in Ford's Theater in the Monumental City, Sam H. Harris will present George M. Cohan in "I'd Rather Be Right," the biting political travesty by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, with musical score by Rodgers and Hart, prior to its New York run in the Alvin Theater, New York, beginning Tuesday, November 2. That this will be a run is indicated by the fact that seats on Broadway already are on sale 12 weeks in advance.

Many inquiries have come to this desk as to why this pungent satire on the New Deal is playing Baltimore, instead of Washington, where its barbed—but, one feels, not poisoned—shafts would have reached so much more sensitive an audience. I am given to understand that Washington would have got the "I'd Rather Be Right" booking had there been any open time at the National.

Through the friendly offices of Mr. John Peter Toohey, a former member of the staff of this estimable journal and now Sam H. Harris' right hand, arrangements have been made—I hope—for the drama desks of this city to attend the Baltimore performance early this week. There will be more concerning this widely discussed frolic, therefore, in this space in due course.

It is pleasant to note in advance that Taylor Holmes is prominent in Mr. Cohan's support, in the role of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. In case it had slipped the mind, Mr. Holmes was the last of the Jeeter Lesters to play Washington in "Tobacco Road," having appeared in the hard-bitten and profane character at the Belasco last year to far better advantage than might have been suspected of so suave and polished a comedian.

On last Saturday night in Roosevelt High School Auditorium the five drama desks of the local press once again served in the precarious capacity of judges of the finals in the annual District one-act play tournament, conducted under the auspices of the Community Center Department. For the second time in succession, decision as to the first, second, third and fourth choices was reached on the first ballot, those ratings having been bestowed, respectively, upon the Arts Club group, the F. B. I. Theater Group, the Troupers of East Washington Community Center, and the Buchanan Parent-Teacher Association Dramatic Club for "Shanghai," "The Hundredth Trick," "The Weak Spot" and "Poor Henry." The voting, needless to say, was predicated upon thoughtful consideration of every essential aspect of production—vehicle, direction, acting, pace, etc., etc. The approximate unanimity of the judges' appraisals is demonstrated by the considerable variations in scoring points accorded the four plays—21, 16, 12 and 6. This year's festivities were brought to a close last night by the tournament dinner in Wesley Hall, always a gracious and lively occasion not too much given to recrimination.

With the third play of the Theater Guild and American Theater Society subscription season in Washington announced as "Tovarich," opening at the National next Monday night, word now comes from the Theater Guild that the fourth subscription play will be hot on its heels—Sidney Howard's "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," with Ethel Barrymore and Dudley Digges, scheduled for the week of November 15. This will leave two more subscription plays still to come—"Yes, My Darling Daughter" and S. N. Behrman's "Wine of Choice."

If anyone entertains a desire to write his name down on the list of 5,500 subscribers already on the books, he had best be about it. After "Tovarich," no more subscriptions will be accepted for the present season.

Since you have been wondering, the sound effects in the Washington Civic Theater production of "Excursion," currently on view at Wardman Park, are attained by an elaborate set-up of radio and telephone equipment, operated by Charles Kopeland from the projection booth at the rear of the auditorium. The boat whistles, fog horns, music, radio announcements and other assorted sounds and noises are picked up by a backstage microphone and reamplified to the audience by public address system. The job is so complex that Mr. Kopeland is assisted by Harold O. King and David Burnstine. Nice work is what we always say. Tonight and Wednesday your last chances to hear it.

Jingle-Bells Note.

Although we haven't yet borrowed a stocking to hang up by the electric heater, there arrived yesterday a handsome copy of "John Gielgud's Hamlet," by Rosamond Gilder, and an oversize game of "The Prisoner of Zenda," from United Artists, which looks something like parchesi or backgammon. All we have to do now is learn how to read and to play the darn thing!

Trips Light Fantastic on Toes

Billed as headliner of the all-star vaudeville bill on the stage of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater this week, Helen Denizon, smiling over her shoulder above, proves herself one of the most accomplished of the contemporary ballerinas. Her work is entirely of the ballet school, with the Twelve American Rockets providing background variety in modern tap and adagio routines.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 24.

Idol chatter: Now that her year of mourning is ended, Norma Shearer is again taking rank as Filmville's No. 1 hostess. Look alikes—and growing more so: Stuart Erwin and early pictures of the late Will Rogers. When you visit Hollywood, better bring your yacht—without one, you are a loss in the best cinema sassiety. Never saw a youngster with more poise and self-confidence than Deanne Durbin. No lovelost: Preston Fostor and Victor McLaglen.

PRESTON FOSTER.

Any Hollywood bookie will give you five to one that Gypsy Rose Lee's marriage will crash within a year. Akim Tamiroff, made up for his current role, reminds me of a nightmare I had when I was a kid. Hollywood's hobby-horse (wo) men: Sigrid Gurie—amateur maker of fine lace. It is a fear of offending French audiences that keeps Charles Boyer from becoming an American citizen, Hollywood ironies: Greta Garbo, of Swedish peasant stock, playing a polish countess—Helena Sobieska, descendant of Polish royalty, an extra on the set.

The dignified Mrs. Tone casts credit on the "new" Hollywood—but she has little of the glamour that made Joan Crawford the screen's most discussed personality. Things I like to think about, those love-sick kids, Anne Shirley and John Payne, hiding away from Hollywood in a modest court bungalow. Never see John Carradine's theatrical swagger without expecting to hear him spout "Hamlet." The refusal of an Atlanta, Go., beauty queen to consider screen offers renews my faith in miracles.

Set-visiting with Binnie Barnes today when a cowpuncher, working on one of the studio's current horse-operas, strolled by, spinning a lasso. Binnie called him back, took the rope, and with a cast that would have done credit to a rodeo star, pinioned the director. And then, while John Cowboy stared in open-mouthed amazement, the gal from England did rope tricks. Not many people know that Binnie got her start in show business by representing herself as a cowgirl from wild and woolly Texas. She starred in vaudeville in South Africa and then took her trick ropping and affected Western drawl to London, where she was given her first screen role.

Ever since he landed in Hollywood, Fred Astaire has been the bane of every interviewer's existence. Whatever he says for publication today, he regrets tomorrow, and since he invariably insists on the right to censor the stories written about him, he usually tears every article to shreds and leaves the writer in despair. Nine questions out of ten he simply refuses to answer, excusing himself on the grounds that he is writing his autobiography for a national magazine and doesn't want to duplicate the material. After four years, the excuse has worn very thin. Fred would be surprised—and alarmed—if he knew how many writers think that autobiography is just a convenient creation of the Astaire imagination. Most of them have taken the "No-more-Astaire-stories" pledge.

I won a bet today and I feel guilty. With a friend, I visited the set where Joan Bennet is working and, before entering, I offered a wager that I could tell what Joan was doing. My companion took the bet and smiled scornfully when I predicted that the youngest Bennett would be listening to her portable phonograph and munching jelly beans. I ought to be ashamed of myself, taking a man's money on a foregone fact. Joan is always playing that phonograph— and eating jelly beans.

Trans-Lux

The high lights in the news, occupying 40 minutes of a stellar show at the Trans-Lux Theater this week, are so numerous that it is difficult to pick out any single one as a headliner.

Wonderful shots of the world's greatest air tragedy, showing the difficult removal of the 19 bodies; the Japs taking Hopei and vivid street fighting in the streets of Shanghai; former Gov. Landon making his latest address to the country and, of great interest to local high school fans, fine shots of the recent game between Eastern High and Gonzaga, all are shown. Fashion, rodeo, Wall Street and many other features complete the news.

With music of "Schubert's Serenade" one of the most beautifully made scenics in color also is shown.

The now well-established "March of Time" is unusually fine this week. You are taken into the daily routine life of the "Wild Bull of Manhattan," Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia. It is proved how poor junk dealers are becoming rich by exporting of junk to foreign countries.

The cartoon for the week is "The Impractical Joker," a bit of Betty Boop nonsense.

Youthful Singer Gets Big 'Break'

Rene Stone, a young tenor who was discovered by the late Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, has been signed to a term film contract by S. J. Briskin. He is 26 years old.

When Stone was only 17, Mme. Schumann-Heink heard him sing in Oklahoma City, took an interest in the youth and encouraged him to continue his musical education. Since then he has sung over the radio in New York, and with marked success on the Chicago Chautauqua circuit.

Junior League

The first of the four entertainments for children sponsored by the Junior League of Washington in co-operation with the Community Center was presented Saturday morning at the Roosevelt High School.

"The Reward of the Sun God," 9by John L. Nelson, is based on an authentic Hopi Indian legend. Enacted by an able Broadway cast, under the direction of Charlotte Chorpenning, the tale concerns two Hopi children who, because of their mischief-making proclivities, arouse the vengeance of the sky gods and bring famine and want to their people. Eager to atone for their misdeeds and obtain forgiveness, Mana and Hoya spend hours of toil in search of food for their parents.

The children emerge victorious in every trial and are rewarded by the Sun God with promise of rain and good harvest if they restore faith in the gods to their people. The jubilant children return home, but are met with skepticism. Their own dauntless faith in immediate relief dispels the doubts of the mother and father, and they all join in a prayer dance to evoke the gods' pleasure. Gradually the sky darkens and the rains descend.

Richard Benedict was a convincing Hoya, being extremely graceful in the dances and notable in his clarity of speech. The mother, as portrayed by Mabel Arnold, was an excellent characterization, and Hilda Prevo had a few shining moments as the provocative little Corn God, Kokozhori. The capable supporting cast included Mona Graham, Mona Segal, Charles Edwards, Marc Garber and Norman Wess, who also doubled as stage manager. The masks and costumes of the production deserve mention, as do the two effective sets.

Sign 'Vow Girls' For Chan's Next

By name, Alice Armand, Iva Stewart, Irma Wilson and Elizabeth Palmer, but by reputation, four of the most photographed girls in the world, this quartet first met at an artists' casting agency in New York three years ago. They became close friends and later made a vow that they would all try for screen careers, but that no one of them would leave for Holloywood unless all four were given contracts.

Six months ago, Twentieth Century-Fox signed them all and took them to Hollywood, where they are being groomed for future importance.

Little

Crowding close upon the attendance record set by "The Informer," the premiere presentation in Washington of "The Wandering Jew" is being continued a second week at the Little Theater, with Conrad Veidt in the title role.

This impressive picturization of a story that has been utilized previously on the screen—a derivative of Eugene Sue's novel and its dramatization—is a profoundly moving subject. It is unfolded on the screen in four phases, depicting the prolonged periods during which Matathias, the Jew, is condemned to walk the earth as a penalty for having spat upon The Christ, bearing the Cross up Calvary. Inclusion of the Crusades, Italian sequences and the Spanish Inquisition affords opportunity for spectacular display, as well as tense and gripping dramatic developments in many climes and periods.

SMITH'S FIELD GOAL GIVES REDSKINS 10-7 VICTORY

Nation's Grid Leaders Strengthen as Two Major Teams Fall

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1937 15

N'Western, L. S. U. Fall From Ranks

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 24.—Despite sundry defections in the list of teams possessing clean slates after a month's campaigning, college football's major aspirants for 1937 championship emerged for the most part unscathed today from the latest struggle with the opposition and the elements. Most of them, in fact, looked better than ever.

Old Man Upset, aided and abetted by rain and snow, ambushed a number of unsuspecting victims, notably Columbia and Syracuse in the East. No less than 11 previously unbeaten teams in so-called major league ranks felt the sting of defeat for the first time. Of last week's national "first ten," however, only Louisiana State and Northwestern were overthrown, as this corner had suspected they would be.

The principal sectional powerhouses rose superbly to their latest tests otherwise during a day marked by (1) thrilling last-period finishes and long-scoring runs, (2) an almost complete absence of tie scores in major competition, and (3) fresh intersectional prestige for both the South and Middle West, mainly at the expense of Eastern teams.

Golden Bears Still Tops.

California on the West Coast, Colorado in the Rockies, Nebraska in the Big Six, Baylor in the Southwest, Vanderbilt, Alabama and Duke, of the Old South; Dartmouth, Fordham, Yale and Pittsburgh in the East, and Detroit in the Middle West, all fortified their places in the Nation's top flight of unbeaten aggregations.

Hampered not in the least by their rating last week as the Nation's No. 1 team in the Associated Press consensus, California's Golden Bears stopped Ambrose Schindler and gave Southern California a 20-to-6 pasting before the day's biggest crowd of 80,000 spectators. The outcome not only solidified California's grasp on conference leadership but emphasized the Rose Bowl ambitions of the Golden Bears, who haven't partaken of the New Year's festivities since Roy Riegels ran the wrong way against Georgia Tech in 1929.

L. S. U. Toppled.

On the opposite side of the country, Dartmouth removed all doubt of its class by trouncing Harvard, 20 to 2, on the heroic mud-running exploits of a lad from the sidewalks of New York, Bill Hutchinson. This pointed the way to next Saturday's outstanding "Ivy League" clash between Dartmouth and Yale, both unbeaten and untied. The Elis, led by Clint Frank, the "Evanston Express," turned back Cornell by 9 to 0, despite the magnificent defensive exploits of the big red's Negro end, Jerome (Brud) Holland.

While Alabama and Duke were achieving intersectional triumphs at the expense of George Washington and Colgate, respectively, the South's biggest uprising was perpetrated by Vanderbilt's Commodores at the expense of Louisiana State, previously not even scored upon.

Scarcely less startling was the ease with which Auburn, featuring the backfield play of Fenton and Kelly ripped through Georgia Tech for a 21-to-0 victory. Auburn struck with such scoring fury for the second straight week that it cannot now be overlooked in any Southeastern Conference title calculations. Meantime North Carolina, with only an early tie on its record, knocked Tulane from the unbeaten ranks, 13-0.

Northwestern Knocked Off.

Ohio State accomplished the downfall of the Big Ten champions, Northwestern, by capitalizing a third-period blocked kick and holding a 7-0 margin despite the furious countereffort of the Wildcats, Michigan, slaughtered the week before by Minnesota, bounced back to nose out Iowa, 7-6, and gain its first conference victory in two seasons.

Minnesota was idle yesterday, taking an extra week to prepare for the coming Saturday's invasion by Notre Dame. The Fighting Irish finally found their scoring punch in the last period against Navy and came from behind to win by 9 to 7 on a snow-swept field.

Pittsburgh and Fordham, the "scoreless wonders," posted notable intersectional victories to keep the East from being routed by invading rivals. Pitt's Marshall Goldberg had a broken-field day as the Panthers crushed Wisconsin, 21 to 0. Fordham was stopped four times in scoring territory before finally putting across the tying touchdowns in the last two minutes and kicking the extra point for a 7-6 victory over Texas Christian.

The biggest shock to Eastern form players was Colmbia's 1-point defeat, 7 to 6, by Brown. The game figured to be just a breeze for the Lions against a team that had been shellacked on successive Saturdays by Harvard and Dartmouth. Sid Luckman's great passing gave Columbia the lead, but Brown marched nearly the length of the gridiron to post the winning points in the final period and then halt Luckman's counter-drive.

Terps March On.

Syracuse, upset winner over Cornell the previous week, was hoist on its own petard by Maryland, whose 13-to-0 victory dropped the Orange from the ranks of the unbeaten. Meantime Detroit's Powerhouse and Western Reserve, the latter unbeaten in 28 consecutive games, kept their season records spotless at the

This Morning

Marshall Bowls Over Writers, But Wins

By Shirley Povich.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—I have just been watching a double-header here in the big Municipal Stadium—the game that was played down on the field by the Redskins and Eagles and the game that was played up here in the press box by George Preston Marshall.

POVICH.

Both the Redskins and Marshall eked out a victory in the last minute of play.

* * * *

Mr. Marshall, as you know, is the very nervous owner of the Redskins who, in his mind, are the little tin dieties of the gridiron. When the Redskins suffer, Mr. Marshall suffers. For 59 minutes today, there was much suffering by Mr. Marshall. His Redskins could show only a 7-7 tie with the lowly Eagles.

* * * *

Using his ground-gaining specialty—the conniption shift—Mr. Marshall rolled up a total of 279 yards of press box territory during the 60 playing minutes this afternoon. He spilled 42 football writers for losses and rolled up 16 first downs while moving down the line simultaneously with his Redskins.

* * * *

When Cliff Battles galloped 8 yards through tackle, Mr. Marshall hunched right along with him—8 yards down the press box, knocking the sports writers loose from their moorings and halting his mad hunching only when he heard the referee's whistle.

* * * *

Mr. Marshall's greatest single gain occurred simultaneously with Battles' 42-yard run late in the fourth quarter. High up here in the press box, Marshall was keeping step with Battles. Marshall personally gained 40 yards on the play despite the fact he eluded nobody. He banged his way through a five-man line of typewriters, hurdled the telegraph operators in the secondary defense of the press box, bowled over two coffee venders and finally was tossed out of bounds when he met up with a girder.

* * * *

And when Battles down there on the field flung his helmet to the ground in disgust because he didn't get loose for a touchdown, why Mr. Marshall, up here in the press box, wrenched off his own 16-buck kelly and sent it skimming far, far below into the $2.20 seats.

* * * *

Like the Redskins, Mr. Marshall moved in two directions. He elbowed his way with 'em when they gained ground and he gave ground grudgingly when the Eagles were pushing the Redskins back. Once when Dave Smukler banged through the Redskins' line for 7 yards, Mr. Marshall braced himself and refused to give an inch.

* * * *

Marshall was caught napping when the Eagles scored to take the lead in the second quarter. For one brief moment he took his eyes from the game to complain to the press box custodian that somebody was crowding him—and it was

Eddie Dunne, Sailor Born In Top Bout

Mamakas in Debut as Turner Opens Indoor Season.

Benny Leonard's sensational lightweight protege, Irish Eddie Dunne, of New York, will unfold his boxing skill tonight at Turner's Arena in a ten-round match with Sailor Born, of Atlanta—headline bout on a 32-round fistic card officially opening the indoor fall season.

Dunne, who won the Irish lightweight championship not so long ago, and has copied Leonard's style perfectly—according to Leonard, himself—will be making his second appearance at the arena.

He made his debut here last winter and scored an impressive victory over Joey Straiges, of Camden. A sell-out crowd saw Leonard's man take the duke.

Leonard will be in Irish Eddie's corner tonight, and will be aided by that ace trainer, Ray Arcel, who has helped condition many champions for important matches. The team of Leonard Arcel and Dunne may prove too much for the sailor boy.

Born, handled by George Shappard, won himself a healthy following by boxing Irish Johnny Dean to a draw at the Stadium about a month ago, and those at the ringside said Sailor was the better fighter.

The Southern boy, who throws plenty of leather, may be on the short end of the odds by ring time tonight.

Charlie (Hobo) Williams, the colorful light heavyweight from Alexandria, seeking a comeback following his defeats at the hands of Champion Freddy Steele and Ben Brown, will hook up with George Prevost, the Fort Meade scrapper. Williams is determined to fight his way back to a headline role, and can do it with a victory tonight.

Steve Mamakos, the Golden Greek, who starred in golden gloves and A. A. U. competition, moves out of the simon-pure class in a four-rounder against Alf Baker, of Baltimore. Mamakos is managed by Matt Twomey and is a stablemate of Lou Gevinson.

The card will open at 8:30, with two youngsters, Vince Bonavari, of Washington, opposing Baby Face Hatcher, North Carolina fighter.

Cincinnati Bows To Los Angeles, 17-7

Cincinnati, Oct. 24 (AP).—The Los Angeles Bulldogs made it five straight American professional football league victories today by defeating the Cincinnati Bengals, 17 to 7.

The Bulldogs combined a passing attack with hard driving line plays to score two touchdowns in the second period, and Gordon Gore kicked a field goal along with gaining two extra points.

The first Bulldog tally followed a 50-yard punt return by Al Nichelini, and the other came on a pass after a 70-yard march with Gore, Bob Miller and Homer Beatty alternating on line plays.

WATCH THIS MAN:—

COLUMBIA'S SID LUCKMAN.
Little: "The best passer I've ever had."

* * * *

The brunt of Columbia's football attack is being borne by a mild-looking boy who, in street clothes, gives the impression of chubbiness. Actually his 6-foot frame carries 190 pounds of finely co-ordinated bone and muscle. Sid Luckman is the name.

He came from Brooklyn, where he was a high school star, after being sought by 23 universities. He came to Columbia because he thought Lou Little could develop him to his fullest potentialities.

The 21-year-old boy is a will-o'-the-wisp, spinning, side-stepping and bouncing off potential tacklers with uncanny skill. Whenever he is hit, he jams on extra pressure that carries his tacklers forward several feet.

He averages 63 yards from where the ball is kicked, on punts; 50 yards on quick kicks. His offensive value is enhanced because the opposition never knows what he'll do.

Luckman passed for two touchdowns against Army and for two against Pennsylvania.

That's why Coach Little says:

Eagles Patrol Airways Against Redskins

Although the caption of this picture might humorously be "As Thousands Cheered," 13,000 persons saw Bill Hewitt, Philadelphia Eagle captain, nearly intercept this pass thrown by Sammy Baugh, of Washington's Redskins, in yesterday's pro game which was won by the Redskins, 10 to 7. The pass was labeled for Riley Smith (35), who is trying to cover Hewitt. Cliff Battles is the third player.

Pittsburgh 13-7 Loser To Chicago

Husky Cardinals Turn on Power to Tally Twice in 2d Half.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 24. — Chicago's husky Cardinals turned on sufficient power for two touchdowns in the second half today to edge out Pittsburgh 13 to 7 in a National Professional Football League game witnessed by 8,963 chilled spectators.

An 18-yard pass from Pat Coffee to Versil Deskin broke the scoring ice in the third period after Doug Russell intercepted a pass on Pittsburgh's 45 and raced it back to the 20. Bill May place-kicked the extra point.

Early in the final period, the Cardinals organized a 75-yard offensive which struck scoring dirt on a 2-yard wide run around left-end by Jimmy Mawrence. This time Hal Pangle's placement try for the point after touchdown went wide.

The Pirate touchdown developed spectacularly on the first play after the ensuing kickoff, which went out of bounds. With the ball put in play on Pittsburgh's 35, Max Fiske gave a long pass to Bill Davidson, who took it behind the Cardinal safety man and traveled unmolested across the goal line. Izzy Weinstock place-kicked the extra point.

Previously, the Pirates were held for downs on th Chicago 3-yard line after a quick-forming running attack and a pass interference penalty brought them more than 50 yards.

The Cards outdwoned Pittsburgh 10 to 8.

25,000 Watch National Pro League Leaders Use Two Teams to Trim Interborough Rivals; Leemans Shines.

New York, Oct. 24.—Two teams of New York Giants rolled over, around and through the hapless Brooklyn Dodgers for a 21-to-0 triumph at the Polo Grounds this afternoon. A chilled crowd of 25,000 saw the Giants, Eastern division leaders in the National Professional League, mow down their interborough rivals.

The Giants took command of the game less than two minutes after the opening kick-off and dominated it completely thereafter. Tuffy Leemans, the hard-running Giant back, cut through right tackle and went to the Dodger 45 from his own 24. As he went down he lateraled to Ward Cuff, who galloped over the goal line, aided by some great blocking by Ray Hanken who dumped Jim Austin. Steve Owen sent his second "first" team into action in the second period and it accounted for another score. Kink Richards ripped off a 26-yard gain to the Dodgers' 23 and sent up the scoring play, a pass from Ed Danowski to Les Corzine.

Meanwhile the Dodgers' attack, such as it was, had little success against the savage Giant lines. The first Giant eleven came in again in the third quarter, stopped two Dodger drives in which Shipwreck Kelly figured and then scored again.

Corzine intercepted one of Kelly's passes, putting the ball on the Dodger 24. Leemans than flipped a pass to Cuff over the goal line for the final touchdown. Tilly Manton came in to place-kick his third point of the afternoon and his twenty-second as a Giant.

The Giants, preparing for an engagement with the Chicago Bears next week, took it easy. They unveiled no novel trickery and relied on the savage charging of the linemen and Brooklyn mistues for strategy. Leemans, who gained 65 yards in the first quarter, was the outstanding back with Cuff and Corzine doing their share.

Stray Passes Give Tigers 24-0 Victory

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Two intercepted passes, a 68-yard run and a tricky lateral gave the Rochester Tigers a touchdown in each period today as they defeated the New York Yankee, 24 to 0, in an American Professional Football League game before 6,000 shivering spectators.

In the first quarter, Bill O'Neill, Rochester halfback, took a pass in the flat from Harry Newman and twisted and squirmed 68 yards behind spectacular blocking to score. Newman's attempted conversion was blocked.

Jerry Stulgaitis, Rochester end, seized a Yankee pass which Legs Endler batter into his hands in the second period and raced 50 yards for the second score. Again the conversion failed. In the third quarter, a 33-yard forward lateral, Les Post to Endler to Vince Farrar, a guard, gave Rochester its third touchdown. The try for point failed.

Big Jim Mooney, Yankee coach and former Georgetown end, suffered a fractured left ankle in the contest. Mooney was blocked in a play early in the third quarter and fell, twisting the ankle. He was taken to a hospital where an examination revealed the fracture.

Baltimore Wins From Portsmouth

Goldberg, Portsmouth half, faked a pass near midfield in the opening stages of the game and ran the ball to the Baltimore 4-yard line. The Virginians gained only half a yard on the next four tries.

Baltimore gained most of its ground on passes and wide plays.

Alfred Ace Leads East In Scoring

Glynn, Soph Halfback, Scores in Mud, Boosts Total to 54.

By the Associated Press.

Glynn proved himself a good "mudder" last night, splashed 50 yards to a touchdown on a slippery field against Kenyon College of Ohio, and boosted his total point-production for the year to 54 to take first place. His nearest rivals for the sectional lead were last week's co-leaders, Sid White, of Brooklyn College, and Bill Tranavitch, of Rutgers, with 50 each.

Neither White nor Tranavitch was able to increase his total in yesterday's play. Tranavitch went scoreless against Princeton. White scored two touchdowns, but a recheck of his previous scoring cut 12 points off his total, with two earlier tallies going to a teammate.

Phil Albano, of Niagara University, was the place-kicking pacesetter with 10 extra points for the season.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—At a point in the fourth quarter when the big hands of the stadium clock had snipped off all but 25 seconds of the ball game, Washington's Redskins produced a story book finish to beat Philadelphia's Eagles this afternoon.

A bungling Washington team, the heavy favorite, seemingly was to be held to a 7-7 tie by the lowly Eagles when Quarterback Riley Smith made a mighty pendulum of his kicking toe and swung victory to Washington by the score of 10 to 7.

As the inexorable ticking of the timekeeper's watch appeared to have frustrated all attempts to pull a Redskin triumph out of the bunglesome proceedings, Smith dropped back to the Eagle's 27-yard line and sent a wickedly-driven place kick zooming through the uprights for a field goal. Three plays later, the game ended.

Battles Gets Going.

The Redskins had another hero—Cliff Battles. But it was not until the Washington club made its last-ditch bid for victory that Battles exchanged the goat's horns for the hero's mantle. It was Battles' shoddy handling of the ball, his frequent fumbling, that all afternoon had bogged down the Washington attack.

Late in the fourth quarter he had fumbled an Eagle punt for the fourth time, and when Stockton recovered the ball for the Eagles on the Redskins' 45-yard line, the Philadelphia club greedily pressed on for a winning touchdown.

Then it was that Battles leaped into the breach for the Redskins. As the Eagles attempted a pass, Cliff intercepted the ball and galloped 42 yards up the field to give the Redskins one last scoring chance. He ran it to the Eagles' 42 and then he hammered at the Eagles' line until he ran it to the 21.

Here the Redskins' attack stalled in the last minute of play. Tipping their hand, the Redskins ran the ball directly in front of the uprights on fourth down. Smith dropped back and Sammy Baugh held the pass from center, and the kick sailed 30 yards beyond to the running track that encircles Philadelphia's huge Municipal Stadium.

The 13,167 customers, Philadelphia's largest crowd of the professional season, saw the Eagles take a 7-to-0 lead in the first period after the Redskins, with unpardonable fumbling, had dissipated four scoring chances.

Redskins Tie Score.

A pass brought the Eagles their score after Baugh was rushed on a passing attempt and fumbled the ball with Hughes recovering for the Eagles on the Redskins' 36 line.

Emmett Mortell, who played his college football for Wisconsin, then whipped an aerial to Joe Carter, a Texas graduate, and the black-haired end was utterly uncovered. He caught the ball on the 7-yard line and stepped across the goal unmolested. Dave Smukler kicked the extra point.

Ten minutes of the third quarter had passed before the Redskins tied the score. It was a pass play that covered 59 yards with Sammy Baugh, heaving one of his rare long aerials, to elongated Charlie Malone, his favorite end. Malone took the ball on the Eagles' 30, eluded the Philadelphia safety man with a bit of fancy cutting and crossed the goal standing up.

All afternoon the Redskins were wasting their power with their butterfingered handling of the ball. In the first half when the Eagles left the field with a 7-0 lead, they had marked up only one first down to the Redskins' 10. At the end of the game, the Redskins had 16 first downs to the Eagles' 2. They had gained 162 yards by rushing to the Eagles' 32 and they had made 143 passes to the Eagles' 59—and they were extremely fortunate to win the game by 3 points.

formance over a mud bogged course. Miss Margaret Cotter's Rocksie and Charley Carrico's Recall came in for the last two places with Two Leggins, the only Whitney entry to place, bagging the red.

Miss Myers, a very skilled and enthusiastic horsewoman, was a popular win. With footing as slimy as it was, this was an excellent test of real hunting safeness and the performances were all remarkably free of mishaps.

The big money hunter class, the stake class, turned out to be practically all Whitney entries, with the only outsider, Tandem again, taking third. Here once more the lack of hunter entries in this show became painfully apparent.

Miss Cotter Wins.

The civilian jumper event saw Miss Margaret Cotter, on Rocksie make a noble come back after her fall Saturday, to win hands down against the best of the nonmilitary jumpers. Rocksie seemed to have finally settled down to business and was taking them with his old assurance. Charley Carrico came in for a second place after taking a glide to the ground during the jump off. Hunger Marcher thought he'd like to get away from there, and Mr. Carrico, with the reins entwined around his hands, perforce went skidding along through the mud for some 20 yards, loosing considerable dignity, but none of his touch, as he remounted and finished the course in fine style. Brandonia, ridden by his ownr, Miss Frances Crouse, had a conspicuously fine ride the first time around, but tore into the timber considerably on the jump off and was pushed down to third place.

The results in the hunt team class were something of an upset with the illustrious Whitney grays relegated to an unfamiliar second place by the Fort Myer entry. The Myer team, consisting of Maj. Arthur P. Thayer on Castellon; Capt. Larry Smith riding Broomfield, and Lieut. R. E. Weber on Eyes Delight. This team had one of the prettiest performances that has been seen in local show rings in several blue moons, and through sheer brilliance and efficiency outweighed the superior conformation of the grays. Another Whitney combine came in for the third.

The summaries:

Class 28, $300 hunter stakes—First, Two Leggings (Mrs. J. H. Whitney); second, Bon Diable (Mrs. J. H. Whitney); third, Tandem (Miss Myers); fourth, Missing Cady (Mrs. Whitney).

Thunderbird's 'Indian Sign' On Cliff Olsen

Thunderbird, a full-blooded Indian hailing from the Saanich Tribe, Vancouver Island, has been promoted to top billing on Promoter Joe Turner's rasslefest as a result of four consecutive victories here.

The Chief, who flew East only two months ago—his first invasion of this section—demanded a main bout after his stirring victory over Kansas Jack Hader Thursday night at the Arena. Without consulting Turner, Thunderbird entered the ring in full Indian regalia just before the Olsen-Joe Cox match went on, and challenged the winner.

Olsen whipped Cox in rather "flukey" fashion. The Swede tossed Cox through the ropes into the first aisle, the Kansan's left leg breaking through the top of a ringside chair. It was one of the most dramatic finishes of the season. Six policemen did noble rescue work in extricating Cox, while Referee Bortnick tolled off the count of 10 awarding Olsen the bout.

Thunderbird, always a slow starter, has been finishing like a cyclone. That's what Hader thought struck him when he went down in the third round of their scheduled four-rounder last Thursday.

Record Crowd Watches as Chicago Captures Fifth Win in Row.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The Chicago Bears, playing before the largest crowd ever to see a professional football game here, won their fifth straight National League victory today by defeating the Detroit Lions, 28 to 20, in a hair-raising battle at Wrigley Field.

With 34,530 spectators in the stands, the Bears tightened their grip on the league leadership by scoring one touchdown in the opening period, tallying twice in the second and putting over another touchdown in the final stanza. The Bears, by their spectacularly earned win, maintained their standing as the only undefeated team in the major professional circuit.

A partially blocked Detroit punt, giving the Bears possession on the Lions' 26, started Chicago on its way. Bronko Nagurski climaxing the scoring driving with a 3-yard touchdown smash. The second period had the fans on the edge of their seats. As a result of a long drive on the ground, the Bears had only a yard to go for a touchdown as the stanza opened, and on the first play Bernie Masterson went over.

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al:

Just mention War Admiral in the press box and you're liable to get hit over the head with the eighth pole. The scribes are just about fed up on the handling of the 3-year-old champion. The colt, winner of the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, began the year as the press box favorite. A wide majority of the writers picked him in both of his big races and he made good for them. Then came his leg injury and his long period on the shelf. At Havre de Grace, War Admiral began working out and the boys took it for granted that he would start there. He continued to work while Owner Samuel D. Riddle and Trainer George Conway continued to set this and that date for his comeback race. Now, Laurel is in the final week and War Admiral still hasn't been to the post. Conway and others of the Glen Riddle Stable make big shows out of War Admiral's workouts. They have led the writers to believe they would start him in this stake and that until the colt's situation has become a joke. In the first place, War Admiral's leg injury was not serious. Evening Shadow, trained by Bert Mitchell, suffered virtually the same injury and was back on the track in two weeks. In contrast to Seabiscuit, taking on all comers at any distance, War Admiral is being handled as if he were a china statue of a horse. A variety of reasons have been given for this. Afraid he will be beaten; doesn't want colt to pick up big weight; War Admiral is working well but pulling up "disky;" Charlie Kurtsinger won't ride the colt any more—that's a few of the rumors. Others say War Admiral is being withheld to get big offers for match races. Last week one of the messengers came to the press box and yelled, "Here's your chance, fellows. Riddle's down in the paddock and he has War Admiral with him." Not a man looked up. BILL.

First race—Flying Orphan gets in action here with only 102 pounds and seems suspiciously placed. Can better that last considerably and I'm going to string along. Acautaw, bad legs and all, is dangerous in a field as cheap as this. Peppery might surprise even at this short route.

Second race—Great Haste has demonstrated some ability in better fields than this and with a good ride can overcome the top weight assignment and grab the purse. Sachem gave a fair account of himself recently and needed that race. Noble Boy to take care of the others.

Third race—Mida R. closed like the wind in a sprint here and appears to be the best thing of the day. Gold Color and Bertillion to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Great Blaze did all asked last Friday and looks capable of making it two in a row. The Runner has plenty of speed and looms as a distinct threat in this company. Aglow has early foot and may stay longer this time.

Fifth race—Careful Miss and Bright Light to battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are dead fit and should appreciate the promise of an off track. Aladdin's Dream should find a money place with that late speed.

Sixth race—Silver Braid and Marvel Play, teamed as the Thatcher entry, may take this purse. The former has plenty of speed and is dropping down a notch. Bold Pirate and Sugboat to complete the money circle.

Seventh race—Tiempo may get to the front and run the legs off this sort of opposition. Patient Saint will have the right track and is dangerous. Amgood is better than generally rated and is a possible surprise.

Best bet—Mida R.

Fall Series Races Won By Leaders

Windjammers of the Potomac River Sailing Association had a cool sail yesterday as a fresh Westerly sent them scudding over the Hains Point course in the fifth race of the fall series, and the favorites represented by Verner Smythe, Judge Prentice Edrington, Leslie Wright, Ted De Boer, Adrian Gilbert, and Culley Cobb sailed home intact to top honors.

With but one race left for next Sunday (weather permitting) today's winners loom as favorites to cop the sailing association's silverware after final results are compiled next week.

Lady Avon piloted by Judge Prentice Edrington held a top-heavy lead in the 20-foot open class and after yesterday's victory, the former international star class champion may tangle with an iceburg next week without seriously impairing his chances.

Second Place Boats.

H. Clinton Bush's Cricket II stands close-hauled with Ralpy Youngs' Myray for second honors in the class, and Bill Heinz's Madic "may surprise."

Sassy Too skippered by D. Verner Smythe, is a sure winner, unless the committee should find a motor hidden in her hull, but Charles Dodge, a youthful veteran, who sails Nandua, and Clyde Crult, another veteran aboard the red-hulled So Big, are close for second place, and the nod for third goes to Ernie Covert's Escapade.

Former Class A Champion Ted De Boer stands fair to repeat, as Sandpiper's run yesterday landed her in first place and hung up the day's best time of 23:35, on a shortened course of 2¼ miles.

Arthur Carr's Sea Gull and Bobcat, of the Sea Scouts, skippered by Scout Capt. Fred Tilp, needs another race to dope the winner, but Sea Gull leads in points, taking a second yesterday to Bobcat's third.

Class B. Race.

The Class B boats in close sailing are led by Culley Cobb's Little Dipper, with Tern and Sink Quick, piloted by Lacey and Dankers, second and third.

Adrian Gilbert's 14-foot Swan showed Lucky Duck and Bill Preston's Flighty the way home yesterday, but Flighty took a first last week and Lucky Duck remains in the running.

Leslie Wright, who provided the spectacular thrill of the President's Cup Regatta, is out ahead in the Snipe Division with Lawrence Greever's Alvern left second and the places, respectively in yesterday's race.

A total of 34 skippers shoved off yesterday with the fleet expected to be a war-time strength next for the final run of the season.

Grid Roundup

expense of Boston College and Boston University.

Princeton knocked Rutgers from the unbeaten class, 6 to 0, but Lafayette upset expectations to bowling over New York University, 13 to 0, to keep its spotless record in tact. Lafayette has not been scored on in four games. Holy Cross preserved its unbeaten record by sitting tight on a 6-point margin over Western Maryland. Villanova, likewise undefeated, avenged last year's setback by trimming Bucknell, 21 to 0.

Pennsylvania's luckless forces experienced one of yesterday's worst breaks. Fighting hard to break a scoreless deadlock with Georgetown the Quakers accomplished a field goal near the end of the game, only to have it nullified by discovery that a twelfth man, substitution-bent, was on the gridiron when the kick was made.

Contrasting with this was the exploit of Kansas in completing a touchdown pass on the last play of the game to beat Oklahoma, 6 to 3, in a Big Six upset. Nebraska, tied the week before by Oklahoma, cashed in on its aerial attack to beat off Missouri, 7 to 0.

Baylor continued its sensational streak and fortified undisputed hold of the Southwest Conference leadership by trouncing Texas A. and M., 13 to 0, as "Bullet Billy" Patterson enjoyed another sharp-shooting afternoon. Rice, which previously had not tallied a point, got up off the floor to knock out the University of Texas, 14 to 7.

Colorado University steam-rolled Colorado State, 47 to 0, to strengthen the belief it has the standout Rocky Mountain team. Utah, meanwhile, was knocked off by Denver, 13 to 7.

Michigan State's flashy back, Jack Pingel, personally accounted for all three touchdowns as the Spartans downed Marquette, 21 to 7.

By Bob Garrison.

Local college teams, which registered one victory, one tie and sustained two losses on the gridiron Saturday, return to the business of smoothing out imperfections today without so much as drawing a restful breath and it might be said that it is being done in self-defense.

George Washington's battered grid representatives, beaten but certainly not disgraced in their struggle with Alabama, a 19-0 decision against them, must remain up on its collective toes in anticipation of the Golden Hurricane of the University of Tulsa, which they meet Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

Georgetown returned somewhat in the role of hero after its moral victory registered in the form of a scoreless tie with the University of Pennsylvania eleven.

The Flying Cardinals of Catholic University are due to arrive in town around noon today and begin work for their game with West Virginia Wesleyan University two weeks hence. Coach Arthur (Dutch) Bergman intends to do a little experimenting and shifting of players in an attempt to strengthen his club, which lost to St. Louis University in the Missouri City, 7 to 2.

Homecoming is the occasion for Coach Frank Dobson to take his amazing Maryland University eleven onto the practice field this afternoon and brush up for the Alligator Team of the University of Florida, which will play the Terps on the day of celebration, Saturday.

Returning here to renew the letic relations the two schools enjoyed for six years before it was recessed last season, the Tulsa Oilers, who have been playing first rate football, present Coach Jim Pixlee and his staff of G. W. coaches with another headache, coming fast on the heels of the Alabama setback.

Tulsa first visited Washington in 1931, practically unknown and unheard of in the East, and soon was a prime favorite here. In 1934, when the Colonials gained their first victory over the Oilers, more than 20,000 persons, the largest night grid crowd in local history up to that time, packed Griffith Stadium for the game.

Tulsa is now ahead in the series, four triumphs to two. George Washington, however, won in the last two meetings, scoring a 10-0 win in 1934 and winning by the margin of a field goal the following season. And much in the play of the Buff forward wall was found to hearten "Botchey" Koch, line coach, who had the pleasure of watching his forward wall battle on nearly even terms with Alabama.

Georgetown will rely on Tommy Keating, who was the leading ground gainer on the field Saturday against Penn, although playing with a broken rib, to lead it to a victory over Manhattan, which has been experiencing a mediocre season.

Catholic U.'s work will be as much in preparation for the remainder of the schedule as it will be for W. Va. Wesleyan, scheduled for November 9. Against St. Louis, the Cards did not fare so poorly. In the matter of statistics, they enjoyed a slight advantage over the Billikens but failure to make the most of scoring chances spoiled whatever opportunity the Brookland lads had of winning.

Even though it gained wide recognition for its victory over the undefeated forces of Syracuse, Saturday, Maryland must work hard for its game with Florida, which is said to have its strongest club in recent years.

Dickerson Leads Celtics to Victory

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 24 (AP).—Led by Foots Dickerson, former Virginia Tech backfield star, the Alexandria Celtics overcame a three-point lead in the third quarter at Sewanee Stadium today to defeat an alert and fighting Norfolk Clancy eleven, 7 to 3, in a Dixie Pro League game.

Heurich Wins In Recreation Soccer Loop

Only two games were played yesterday in the Recreation Soccer League, Heurich's nosing out Italian A. C. in the final minute of play, 5-4, and Marlboro defeating Young Democrats, 4-2. The Sun Radio-Maryland Park game was postponed because of wet grounds.

Heurich's display at Rosedale did not compaare with their game a week ago, and for a time it appeared that they were beaten, but R. McBain's goal, with but seconds to spare, saved them.

Heurich monopolized play in the second half, but was prevented from scoring by the fine goalkeeping of G. Vecchietti. Finally a splendid cross by Potts was converted by Gunn after 20 minutes of play. Three minutes later, J. McBain placed a free-kick close to the Italian goal and Mirones headed the lying point.

Five minutes later, E. Knight had an opportunity to put his team ahead from a penalty kick, but Vecchetti saved the shot and conceded a corner, which was cleared. For the remainder of the half, Heurich pressed almost continuously for the winning goal, the Italian forward line being seldom in evidence, but just as the game was looked on as a drawn battle, R. McBain got his head on a long drive from Burton and scored the winning counter, the final whistle being blown immediately afterward.

It was a thrilling game for the spectators, strenuous and tense for the players, and the Italians were unlucky to lose it. The Heurich halfback line was weak, throwing too much on the fullbacks. George Vecchietti, in the Italian goal, was possibly the outstanding player.

Delaying Game, Not 12 Men, Saved Hoyas From Penn Defeat

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 24.—University of Pennsylvania football players and fans sadly recharted today the play that might have turned yesterday's scoreless tie with Georgetown University into a 3-0 victory. The play was nullified by a twelfth player on the field and the referee's whistle.

The stage was set for a typical Dick Merriwell performance with End Ned Fielden playing the role of Dick. With 30 seconds to play in the game, the Quakers lined up in place-kick formation, Fielden dropped back for a field goal and his boot from the 26-yard line sent the ball through the cross bars for what appeared to be three precious points and victory.

Instead came the ruling of Referee Dexter Very that the play did not count. Very pointed to Bill Miller, substitute halfback who had rushed onto the field unnoticed by his teammates as they lined up, as the cause for the ruling.

After the game Very, a star end at Penn State back in 1912, said he blew the whistle before the ball was snapped and that Penn was penalized for delaying the game rather than because it had 12 men on the field.

Very said he didn't remember whether a mistake had been made in the number of downs, which Coach Harvey Harman blamed for the error.

Very added that Georgetown gave little resistance on the field goal try, apparently because its players heard the whistle.

Harman, who ordered Miller into the game, said a mistake in downs by Very caused the trouble.

The trouble all started when the substitution of Gustafson for Fielden was refused by Capt. Bob McNamara," Harman said. "I asked Gus why and he told me that the referee insisted it was fourth down when it was only the third. The team's arguments were to no avail, so Mac decided to keep Fielden in, since he was the only placement kicker and a field goal try was the logical move.

"I knew it was the third, so I sent Miller in with instructions to correct a false impression and also call for a pass on third down and if that failed to kick on the fourth down."

Harmna said he didn't hear Very blow the whistle when Miller came on the field.

World Body Seeks to Bar U.S. Athletes

I. A. A. F. Considering Move to Keep America Out of Olympics.

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 24.—Exclusion of the United States from future Olympic games and dismissal of the American Amateur Athletic Union from the International Amateur Athletic Federation because of its anti-Nazi stand are being considered by the international body, it was learned tonight from reliable Italian sporting circles.

Angered by the snub rendered Nazis last summer when barnstorming United States track and field athletes were ordered to omit Germany from their European tour, B. O. Ekelund, president of the international federation, last Monday addressed letters of condemnation to Jeremiah Mahoney, president of the A. A. U., and to the A. A. U. as a body. It was understood the Italian committee of the I. A. A. F., instigated the action.

Mahoney, now a candidate for mayor of New York City, campaigned against sending a U. S. team to Germany for the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, but then President Avery Brundage won his fight to participate.

U. S. Condemned.

Ekelund's letter was said to condemn the "U. S. attitude" of mixing politics with sports and to demand retraction of the anti-Nazi boycott before December 31. The communication was reported to warn that if discrimination against Germany was not withdrawn before the specified date, that consideration of the A. A. U's dismissal from the I. A. A. F. would be included on the Agenda of the next meeting of the international body, in London next March.

If the A. A. U. is dismissed, it would exclude the presence of U. S. athletes in future Olympic competition as well as any other international meets governed by the I. A. A. F. It also possibly would mean nonrecognition in foreign countries of world record performances made by American athletes.

It was learned that the I. A. A. F. addressed a cablegram to Brundage's successor as soon as it was learned that Germany had been omitted from the itineraries of two American track teams that toured Europe last summer, but Mahoney never replied to it.

First Indication.

The first local intimation of friction existing between the I. A. A. F. and the A. A. U. was made in Rome's afternoon paper, Il Piccolo, which said, without any explanation, "As in the case of Ireland, the I. A. A. F. is considering removal of the A. A. U. from its roles by application of its rules."

The letter to Mahoney was said to state that the A. A. U.'s attitude was an unfair exchange for the courtesy and hospitality Germany offered the United States upon the occasion of last year's Olympics and was considered "an insult to the German nation." On this side of the Atlantic Mahoney has been accused repeatedly of adapting an anti-Nazi attitude for political purposes.

The Italian committee is expected to lend full support if, and when, Germany demands the A. A. U. amend its anti-Nazi stand.

Action Would Not Keep U. S. From Games

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 24.—Dismissal of the Amateur Athletic Union from the International Amateur Athletic Federation would not necessarily preclude United States participation in the Olympic games, it was pointed out tonight by A. A. U. Secretary Daniel J. Ferris.

"The A. A. U. usually certifies the American team to the International Olympic Committee, which is a self-perpetuating body and governs the quadrennial games," he said. "If the A. A. U.'s membership in the I. A. A. F. was ended, the American Olympic Committee could certify the United States team to the international committee."

Ferris, however, saw little likelihood of the A. A. U. being dismissed from the international federation, as a majority of the 42 member nations of the federation would have to vote the American body out. He said that such action at this time might possibly be for political purposes to inspire sentiment against re-election of Jeremiah Mahoney at the annual A. A. U. convention in Boston November 13, 14, 15.

Tarheel-Ram Game Heads South's Card

S. Conference Teams Play 4 Intersectional Games Saturday.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24.—Fordham's invasion of Dixie to meet undefeated North Carolina heads the Southern Conference football program for this week-end.

Three other intersectional contests are on the docket with Richmond meeting Duquesne at Pittsburgh Friday night, V. M. I. playing at Army and N. C. State at Boston College.

Duke's Blue Devils, also unbeaten for the season, will resume their campaign for a third consecutive conference title against Washington and Lee at Richmond. The game will give Coach Wallace Wade a chance to rest his regulars after three gruelling struggles in a row—Tennessee, Georgia Tech and Colgate.

Clemson Faces S. C.

The Clemson eleven, which showed surprising strength in swamping South Carolina last week, will meet Wake Forest in the Tigers' second circuit tilt.

Another Palmetto State squad with a perfect loop record—the Citadel—goes to war against South Carolina at Orangeburg, S. C., Friday night. The Bulldogs, beaten only by Navy in six starts, have trounced two family rivals, Furman and Richmond.

Furman and Davidson, who have yet to turn in a conference victory, play at Davidson. Other loop members will go up against foreign opposition.

Cadets Top List.

With leading teams playing outside the conference last week, V. M. I. remained at the top of the standings with three triumphs. Duke and the Citadel trailed with two victories each and will have an opportunity of winning this week-end's games to move into a triple tie with the Keydets for first place.

Larry Kelley, Kept Idle by Influenza, Ignores Doctor to Attend.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 24.—Larry Kelley, former Yale star was ill with influenza and watched from the sidelines today while his teammates, the Boston Shamrocks, easily took an American League football game from Pittsburgh, 27 to 7.

A crowd of 7,500, largest of the season at Fenway Park, turned out for Kelley's heralded professional debut.

After several days in bed Kelley said he had left the infirmary against doctors' orders so he would't disappoint the crowd. He promised to return next week for Boston's game with the New York Yankees.

The crowd was disappointed at not seeing the wise-cracking Eli in action, but gave him a big hand when he was introduced. He flew back to New Jersey after the game.

Boston didn't need his help, however, except in the first period, when held on even terms. The Shamrocks on straight football made the first touchdown midway in the opener, Morris going over, and Blanchard place-kicked the point.

But Pittsburgh retaliated two plays later when Fife recovered Warwick's fumble and dashed 70 yards unmolested for a touchdown, Bardes tying the score with a placement for the extra point.

From this point the Shamrocks waltzed away, an aerial to Prather for 12 yards providing the second marker in the second period and two spectacular 35-yard end runs by Earl Bartlett accounting for the next two in the third.

Sam Baugh's Mark Passed by Texan

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 24.—The passing record of the Southwest's immortal "Slinging Sammy" Baugh, Texas Christian University's All-America quarterback last year and now a star of the Washington Redskins, has been surpassed by another Texan—Cocaptain Monroe (Munsy) McCarty, of the Texas Wesleyan Rams, here.

The Red and Black gridders are making their debut in the Texas Conference this season, and during the Rams' first five games the 163-pound triple-threat halfback has attempted 46 passes, 31 of which have been completed, for a total of 273 yards, to rate an average of .633.

Bay Packers Crush Rams To Keep Pace

By the Associated Press.

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 24.—The Green Bay Packers, of the National Professional Football League, handed the Cleveland Rams their second consecutive setback in as many Sundays by defeating them, 35 to 7, today in the Green Bay team's last appearance at home. It was also the Packers' fourth consecutive league victory.

Green Bay got off to an early start with two touchdowns in the first period, another in the third and two more in the final quarter. Cleveland tallied its lone counter in the second quarter.

A 37-yard run by Packer Halfback Clark Hinkle after he took a 49-yard pass from Bob Monnett accounted for the first Green Bay score.

Another pass, Monnett to Schneidman, was good for another Packer tally later in the same period.

The Packers, after a scoreless second period, counted again four plays after the second half began. Hank Bruder, substitute back, skirted end for this marker from the Cleveland 12-yard stripe.

The Packers got under way again in the closing session when Monnett passed to Gantenbein on the 10, the receiver lateralling to Laws, who scored. Gantenbein then intercepted a pass on the Rams' 38 and raced it back to the 5-yard stripe, where he tossed a lateral to Bud Schammel, who scored the Packer's fifth touchdown. Hinkle turned in his fifth straight placement conversion.

Steel Setback Is Temporary, Producers Say

Output Declines to 53 Per Cent, Lowest Since February, 1936.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 24.—While steel consumers are buying only from hand to mouth and are using backlogs of material bought earlier in the year, producers firmly believe the present setback is temporary and not the beginning of a major recession, says Steel.

Signs that the market is nearing the bottom of the decline are beginning to appear, as buying of certain products shows an upward trend. Sheets are being taken in larger volume as automotive schedules are increased. Bookings of steel bars are approaching September volume, and cold-finished steel shows improved demand. In tubular goods the downward movement shows definite signs of leveling off. A recent order was placed for 30 miles of oil country line pipe for export.

Tin plate producers are operating at about 85 per cent and sheetmakers at 66 to 67 per cent, both these rates being definitely higher than the average for all steel products. Automotive sheet requirments seem certain to increase steadily, and requirements for refrigerator and stove manufacture are at a good rat.

Ten Points Decline.

With backlogs cleared in many products and new business failing to keep pace with deliveries, steel works operations last week declined 10 points to 53 per cent of capacity, the lowest level since early February, 1936. Heaviest cuts in production were at the larger centers, Pittsburgh dropping 11 points to 49 per cent, Chicago 11 points to 46 per cent, eastern Pennsylvania 4 points to 47, and Youngstown 33 points to 55. Wheeling lost 4 points to 70, Cleveland 3 to 65, Buffalo 9.5 to 58, Birmingham 6 to 64, New England 5 to 65, Cincinnati 4 to 66 and St. Louis 8.4 to 51.6. Detroit registered a pain of 3 points to 95 per cent. While some of these schedules will continue this week, further shortening is in prospect at some centers.

Manufacturers of cold-finished bars have reaffirmed current prices, to apply on deliveries to March 31, 1938, on alloy steel and carbon steel grades.

Following action by the leading interest in reaffirming current prices on practically all steel products for first quarter, most independent producers have made similar announcements, thus assuring a steady market through the winter. No action has been taken on pig iron and sharply lower scrap quotations apparently have removed cause for expectation that an advnace might be made late this year.

Bank Stocks Touch New Lows in Week

New York, Oct. 24.—In sympathy with other securities, New York City bank stocks declined to a new low for the year on Tuesday, October 19, but rallied later in the week to show a fair gain at the close, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues at the new low totaled $1,290,480,000. At the close on October 22 the appregate value amounted to $1,554,274,000 compared with $1,498,606,000 At the close on October 22 the agnet increase of $55,668,000, or 3.71 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market closed the past week at slightly higher levels after registering a new 1937 low on Tuesday, October 19. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on October 19 totaled $471,554,000 (the new low). In the subsequent rally all of the week's losses were recovered, the aggregate value at the close on October 22 standing at $499,122,000, compared with $496,979,000 at the close of the previous week, a net increase of $2,143,000, or 0.43 per cent.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Selling Climax Finds Market Nerves Calmer; Business Recesion Moderate.

New York, Oct. 24.—Last week brought a selling climax to the bear market that has been under way since last spring and which since the middle of August, after a summer rally with half the lost ground regained, had carried prices down precipitately to the lowest levels since the summer of 1935. Trading volume on Tuesday, exceeding 7,000,000 shades, was the heaviest since the summer of 1933, but the forcing out of margin accounts of a great amount of stock attracted new buying and the day closed with a rally which was extended in later trading.

Whether the market is being given only a breathing spell and must prepare for lower prices or whether all the business recession that is likely to take place is discounted is the question of the day. Meanwhile the position has both its strong and its weak points.

Certain salients that clearly have been shown to be untenable are, among others, that the market has been engineered by Wall Street without regard to the realities of business conditions; that business recession appeared only recently and after stocks had gone down a long way; that the fall in stocks will in itself cause a business depression; that business has undergone no recession and is unlikely to move in any direction but onward and upward for a long time to come; that the break in prices was the direct result of market restrictions on the technic of trading; that the country is going to the dogs, and finally, that economic management has proved itself as capable of wiping out the old scourges of boom and depression, bull and bear markets.

Recession Moderate So Far.

On the good side the recession in business activity has not gone far and has been more a matter of curtailment of new orders for supplies placed than of a fall in operations. The steel industry has dropped to an operating rate of 55 per cent of capacity, but it is facing better prospects of improvement than of material decline. The Government's plans for cotton, corn and wheat subsidies, unsound as they are from an economic standpoint, nevertheless should guarantee the farmer's income sufficiently to bring on heavy buying of machinery, motors, necessaries and luxuries in rural communities. With an increase in freight rates the early response likely will be the placing of heavy orders for new equipment and repair material.

Finally, the shakeup the country is experiencing may result in lowering building costs and force a more reasonable attitude on the part of labor, so that the much-delayed recovery in building construction can get under way. Commodity prices have had their setback along with stocks. Bonds also have weakened, which must be added to the unfavorable side of the picture, for that handicaps business in need of new capital. Just the same, business may now find it easier to deal with its labor problems, with the prospect of no great increase in employment at hand and to cut its operating cloth to the pattern of probable sales volume and prices.

The worst feature remains the political factor. No one can guess what may happen in money and credit, so long as the budget is unbalanced and the crash in securities prices and the slackening tendency of company profits is bound to reduce Treasury revenues. That emphasizes the uncertainties of taxation as a cost factor in business. To add to the complexity of the affair, the President is giving every indication of a hardening purpose to fight for further business restrictions. At the special session of Congress the wage-and-hour bill will be brought up, farm doles will be voted and higher taxes at least will be discussed.

President's Role.

Those who express their views on the matter and who belong to the so-called "economist," "business leader," or "big banker" classes, are not a unit in their views on what is to follow in trade, but the majority are inclined to think that only a minor recession in business is in store. Private views also favor that side, greatly influenced naturally by inborn optimism and good wishing, and some observers are frankly expectant of development of a real depression.

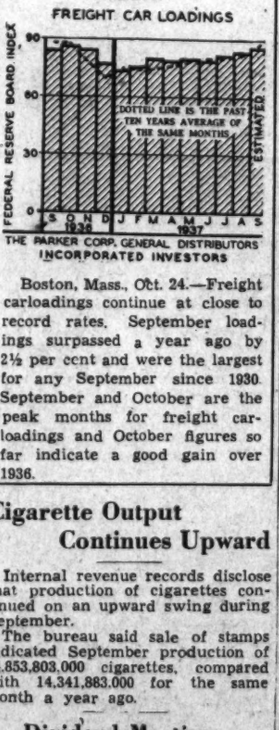
It seems just as true at the end of last week as it was a week ago, a month ago, or a year ago, that the deciding vote is in the President's hands. He can do much to influence the course of business, less by any new method of economic management than by a retreat from the field. Confidence most certainly would flow from an honest balancing of the budget, which would remove the probability of higher taxation; a thorough revision of taxes so as to eliminate the handicaps to business aside from the mere weight of taxes; a firm stand on currency stabilization and opposition to farm bonuses, at least in the form of those now proposed, and, above all, an abandonment of the position that one class of the people must be kept conscious of its inferiority and of the intention of the Administration to remedy the matter by stifling individual and corporate enterprise.

One thing can be expected, and that is the market likely will have the benefit of a series of "good news" for a while. Last Friday's announcement of the freight rate increase was the first sample.

Security Offerings $5,700,000 for Week

New York, Oct. 24.—Cancellation of financing on account of the unsettled condition of the stock market held the volume of new security offerings in this market during last week down to $5,700,000. This compared with $3,135,000 last week, $77,335,000 in the corresponding week of last year, $64,421,000 in the 1935 period, $11,027,000 in 1934 and $31,700,000 in 1933. For the year to date the total is $2,175,998,200, compared with $4,196,893,230 in the like period of last year, $2,808,995,500 in the 1935 period, $1,126,964,000 in 1934 and $512,015,500 in 1933.

September Freight Heaviest Since 1930



Boston, Mass., Oct. 24.—Freight carloadings continue at close to record rates. September loadings surpassed a year ago by 2½ per cent and were the largest for any September since 1930. September and October are the peak months for freight carloadings and October figures so far indicate a good gain over 1936.

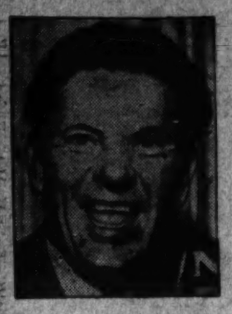
Bob Burns Says—



Discipline ain't nothin' but instilling in us a fear of what's gonna happen to us if we make a wrong move. That's the reason small boys don't fool around with a hornet's nest more than once, because the hornets have their own way of handing out discipline.

My Uncle Gus Rookes use'ta leave the house and he would be gone all afternoon. I wondered where he was spendin' so much of his time, so one day I followed him and when I saw him go up in the hayloft, I sneaked up the ladder and peeked at him and there he was, sittin' on a powder keg. I says "What in the world are you doing—spendin' so much time on that powder keg?" and he says, "Well, I'll tell you. I've got an awful weak will power and I'm tryin' to break myself of smokin'!"

as they drew their pay aboard the Algic late Saturday, yesterday were still in the Baltimore City Jail for lack of $1,000 bond each. They will be arraigned at a hearing before United States Commissioner James K. Cullen a week from Tuesday.

Warrants were issued for 18 members of the crew. Four of these were classed as deserters. According to a report last night, three of these have been located aboard a ship in the North Atlantic, the captain of which has been instructed by wireless to hold them prisoners.

Union spokesmen have been sounding criticism against Chairman Kennedy since he cabled Capt. Gainard in Montevideo to place the crew in irons unless they abandoned their strike and obeyed his orders. Gainard has since said that he had the power to do this and was prepared to do it, but called Kennedy on the telephone because the ship was owned by the Government.

The union has denounced Kennedy's action as "notorious" and "un-American."

Its animus against Ring developed when Ring, on orders of the Maritime Commission, called on Capt. Gainard in Baltimore last Wednesday and "congratulated" him on the way he handled the Algic on a voyage marked by a murder, the drowning of a deserter and three sit-down strikes.

After yesterday's meeting in a Fleet street hall in Baltimore, Chairman Whalen said that the action taken had the complete approval of the union's national headquarters in New York.

Charges Conspiracy.

Whalen said that employes of the maritime commission have "endeavored to destroy the power and entity of the C. I. O. in the Algic incident." He also saw a "conspiracy" between steamship company officials and the American Federation of Labor to "destroy the C. I. O. in the maritime industry."

Referring to the charges against the crew of the Algic, Whalen said these were "obviously trumped up and unwarranted," and that the arrests were "another move on the part of the shipowners in the war to deprive American seamen of their rights of collective bargaining."

Whalen added:

"The charges themselves will be seen, upon examination, to be forced attempts to change what is obviously a labor dispute only into something more serious, a prosecution of criminal charges. The whole structure is characterized and has been built up by the use of falsified statements on the part of the ship officers and testimony obtained by underhand and provacateur methods by spies for the ship company from men on board ship."

Wide Gulf in Views.

"It is further resolved that the National Maritime Union of America herewith formally demands and peitions the President of the United States to remove from office Mr. Kenndy, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, and Mr. Daniel S. Ring, of the United States Maritime Commission, because of their bias and prejudice against organized labor, and particularly the Committee for Industrial Organization, and its affiliates, and because of their neglect to perform their duties without prejudice and favor."

In the approach to the Algic case, there is a wide gulf between the view of the union and that of the Federal officials involved. The union men view it as an ordinary labor dispute, one that should be handled by the National Labor Relations Board. Officials of the Maritime Commission and the Department of Justice view it as a matter of law. When sailors sign a ship's articles, they insist, those sailors, in effect, contract to obey the captain in all lawful orders until the voyage is over. Therefore, these Government officials say, the sympathy strike in Montevideo was somewhat different from a strike in an automobile factory.

Pawnshops Give Lead In Union War Murder

Hackensack, N. J., Oct. 24 (AP).—Leaving for Pittsburgh, Pa., to question two pawnbrokers, William B. Mehler, assistant Bergen County prosecutor, predicted tonight a "definite break" in the unsolved eight-month-old R. Norman Redwood murder. Redwood, New York "sandhog" union leader, was shot down outside his Teaneck home last February and Prosecutor John J. Breslin has blamed the slaying on New York labor union warfare. The murder gun, Breslin said, was traced to a Pittsburgh pawnshop.

1,700 Reported Slain or Hurt In Haitian-Dominican Riots

The statement was dated October 15. It was prepared by Evremont Carrie, Haitian Minister to the Dominican Republic, and Joaquin Balaguer, Dominican Secretary of State of Foreign Relations and sent to the ministers here several days ago.

Lescot and Pastoriza had received no recent report on the nature of the border troubles last night. They were both convinced that whatever troubles had occurred would not result in strained relations between governments of the two countries.

Held Civil Matter.

The Dominican Legation indicated that when persons responsible for the difficulties were found, both governments would co-operate in settling the matter through civil courts.

The statement they issued follows:

In view of preventing certain events which took place in the northern frontier between Dominicans and Haitians of becoming a motive for exaggerated comments which would tend to destroy the harmony and cordial relations which both the Honorable President Trujillo and the Honorable President Vincent have tried to create and increase, inspiring themselves in the common fate and in peace and prosperity for both countries, it is made public that the cordial relations existing between the Dominican Republic and the Republic of Haiti have not been impaired.

That the Dominican government, energetically condemning the facts which were denounced, has immediately opened a careful investigation in view of settling responsibilities and applying the necessary sanctions, in accordance with the result of the investigation, and therefore it can be assured beforehand that everything will be satisfactorily solved for both governments.

That the good friendship which has always existed and which actually exists between the Honorable President Trujillo and the Honorable President Vincent constitutes the most powerful and efficient strength against the destruction of harmony between the two countries and the patriotic work of these two presidents, work which has deserved the applause of all the nations of the civilized world owing to its high spirit of morality and justice.

Official Toll Only 16.

Lescot said last night that information he had received on October 19 had indicated only 16 persons had been wounded.

"So far as I know," M. Lescot declared, "there was merely a border incident in early October between small peasant proprietors on both sides of the northern frontier. Although it is possible that many persons have been killed, I certainly have not been informed to that effect; and, in any case, political relations between the two governments are very cordial.

"A joint inquiry, still in progress, was undertaken immediately after the trouble occurred," continued M. Lescot, who was Haitian Minister to the Dominican Republic shortly before his appointment to the legation at Washington.

"In any case, I am absolutely certain that nothing will happen to any Dominicans residing in Haiti," the minister added. "President Vincent has acted very wisely since the beginning of this trouble and the Haitian government will be fully able to protect Dominicans within its borders."

Border Peaceful 93 Years.

Officials at the Dominican Legation said it was unbelievable that any trouble on the border would leave a toll of 300 dead, or a possible toll of 1,700 killed and wounded.

In the last 93 years, they said, the border has been free of major clashes. Along its 200 miles Dominican soldiers are stationed at only two points, Comendador and Dajobon. The size of each garrison would not exceed a dozen men, they said.

They denied possibiltiy that emigration pressure from Haiti, or racial conflict, would lead to any across the border is not closely restricted, they said, and citizens of Haiti have not been discouraged from settling in the Dominican Republic.

Haiti, with an area nearly half that of the Dominican Republic, has a population twice that of its neighbor. The figures are: Haiti, area, 10,204 square miles; population, 2,550,000; Dominican Republic, area, 19,332 square miles, population, 1,200,000. The employment problem presented by over-crowding in Haiti has caused a continual stream of emigration from Haiti into the Dominican Republic.

Wm. Penn's Home May Be Restored

Bristol, Pa., Oct. 24 (AP).—"Pennsbury," the home of William Penn, may be restored to its former glory if Public Works Administration officials in Washington approve a $237,000 project planned by the State authority.

The Pennsylvania historical commission has finished research work and excavations that enable it to blue print the exact plan of the early eighteenth century showplace of America. Its task was a difficult one, because the old manor collapsed just before the Revolutionary War and another house, still standing, was built over part of the site in the early 1800's.

Colonial Demands Held Told at Rome

Paris (Monday), Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The pro-Italian newspaper, Le Jour, said today that Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German Ambassador to London, told Premier Mussolini that Germany's minimum colonial demands include the return of Togo, the Cameroons and Ruandaurundi in Africa and the creation of a vast internationalized territory in Africa for common exploitation by France, Britain, Germany and Italy.

Rail Work Trains Crash; Score Hurt

Coatesville, Pa., Oct. 24 (U.P.).—A Pennsylvania Railroad work train crashed into the rear of another work train at Lenover, 10 miles west of Coatesville, tonight, injuring more than a score of workmen. The injured were brought to the Coatesville, Hopital, which reported at least six in serious condition.

Mrs. Hawkins, Who Recalled Civil War, Dies

Services to Be Held Today for Veteran's Widow, Burial Tomorrow.

Mrs. Janie Smith Hawkins, who as a little girl used to cover up her ears to shut out the booming of the cannon near Lynchburg, died Saturday at the age of 84, at her home, 3431 Fourteenth street northwest.

Widow of a Civil War veteran, N. D. Hawkins, of Washington, Mrs. Hawkins frequently recalled how she was "frightened to death" during Hunter's Raid at Lynchburg, when a picket line was established through the yard and garden of her grandfather's farm, where she lived. Mrs. Hawkins was the niece of Maj. Gen. M. N. Moorman, C. S. A.

Born in Campbell County, Virginia, in 1853, Mrs. Hawkins was married in Lynchburg 21 years later; and in 1924 she and her husband celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in Washington. At the time of his death here in 1931, he was brigadier general of the Confederate Veterans of Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Hawkins was a member of Manorhurst Chapter, D. A. R., Stonewall Jackson Chapter, U. D. C., and of the Francis Asbury Methodist Church.

She is survived by seven children, J. H. Hawkins, N. D. Hawkins and the Misses Mamie and Evelyn Hawkins, of Washington; Mrs. J. K. Walker, of Bedford, Va.; Mrs. J. M. McChesney, of Abingdon, Va., and Mrs. Henry G. Ellis, of Petersburg, Va., and 13 grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at Mrs. Hawkins' home at 3 p. m. today. She will be buried in Bedford tomororw.
